

Design Science HS
(CMA Students Counted as Not Proficient)

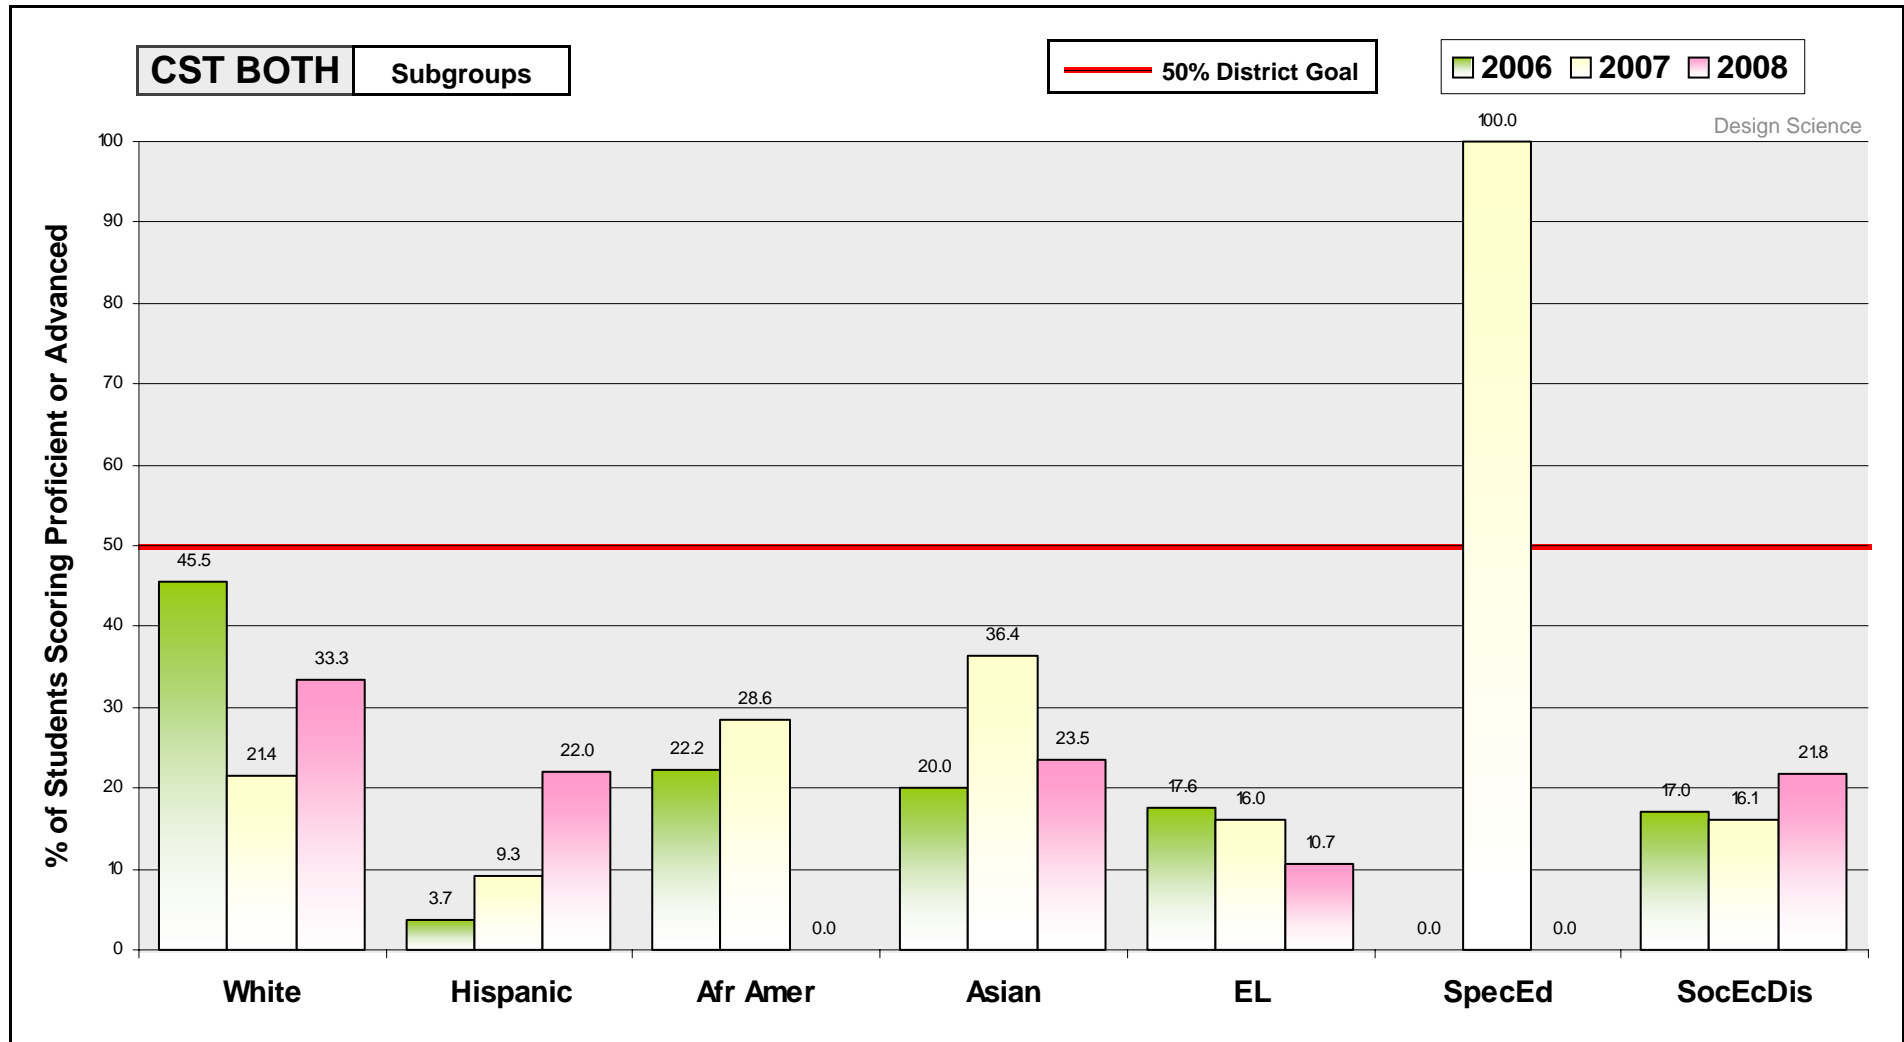

- The purpose for the CST Proficiency Charts is for schools to compare change across years. Therefore, students in grades 3-5 who took the California Modified Assessment (CMA) in 2008 are counted here as scoring not proficient. The California Department of Education (CDE) will not assign proficiency levels for this CMA in 2008.
- The chart is based on students continuously enrolled in the school since October until CST testing of the respective school year.
- CAPA & STS are excluded from the chart.

Design Science HS
(CMA Students Counted as Not Proficient)

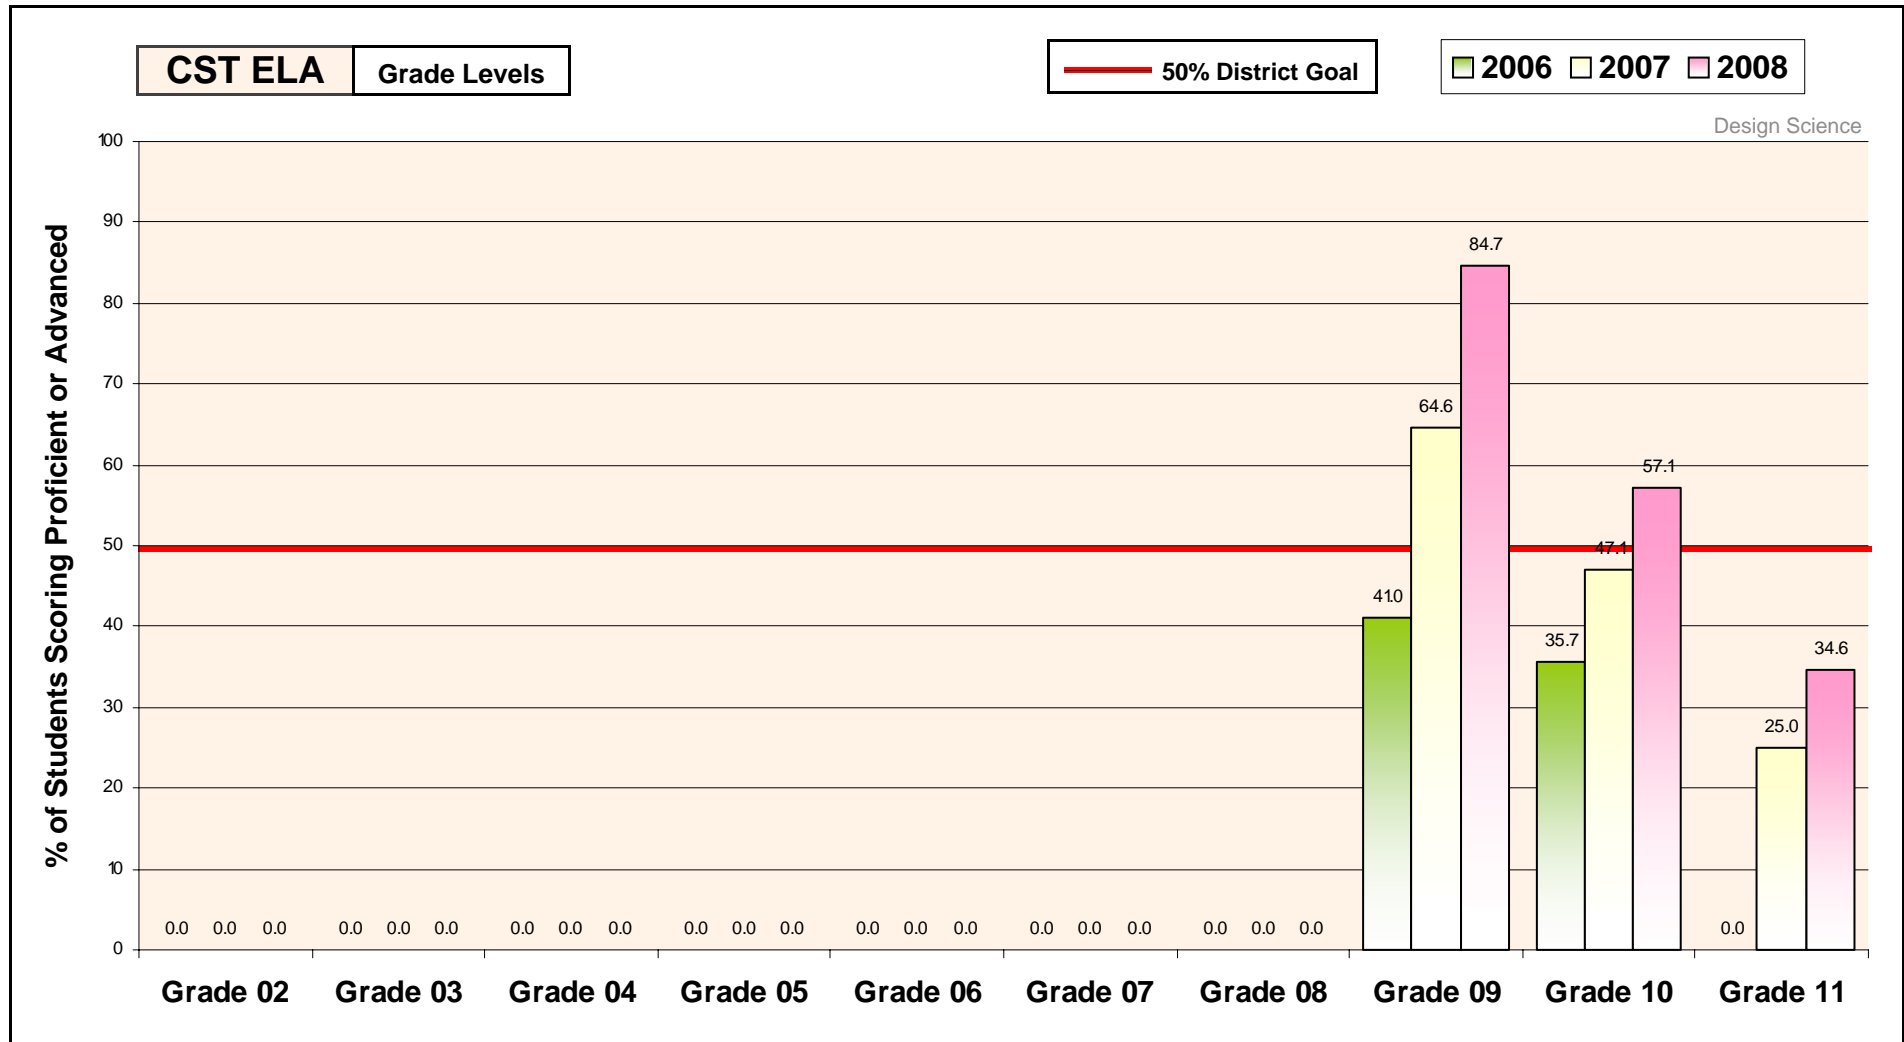

- The purpose for the CST Proficiency Charts is for schools to compare change across years. Therefore, students in grades 3-5 who took the California Modified Assessment (CMA) in 2008 are counted here as scoring not proficient. The California Department of Education (CDE) will not assign proficiency levels for this CMA in 2008.
- The chart is based on students continuously enrolled in the school since October until CST testing of the respective school year.
- CAPA & STS are excluded from the chart.

Design Science HS
(CMA Students Counted as Not Proficient)

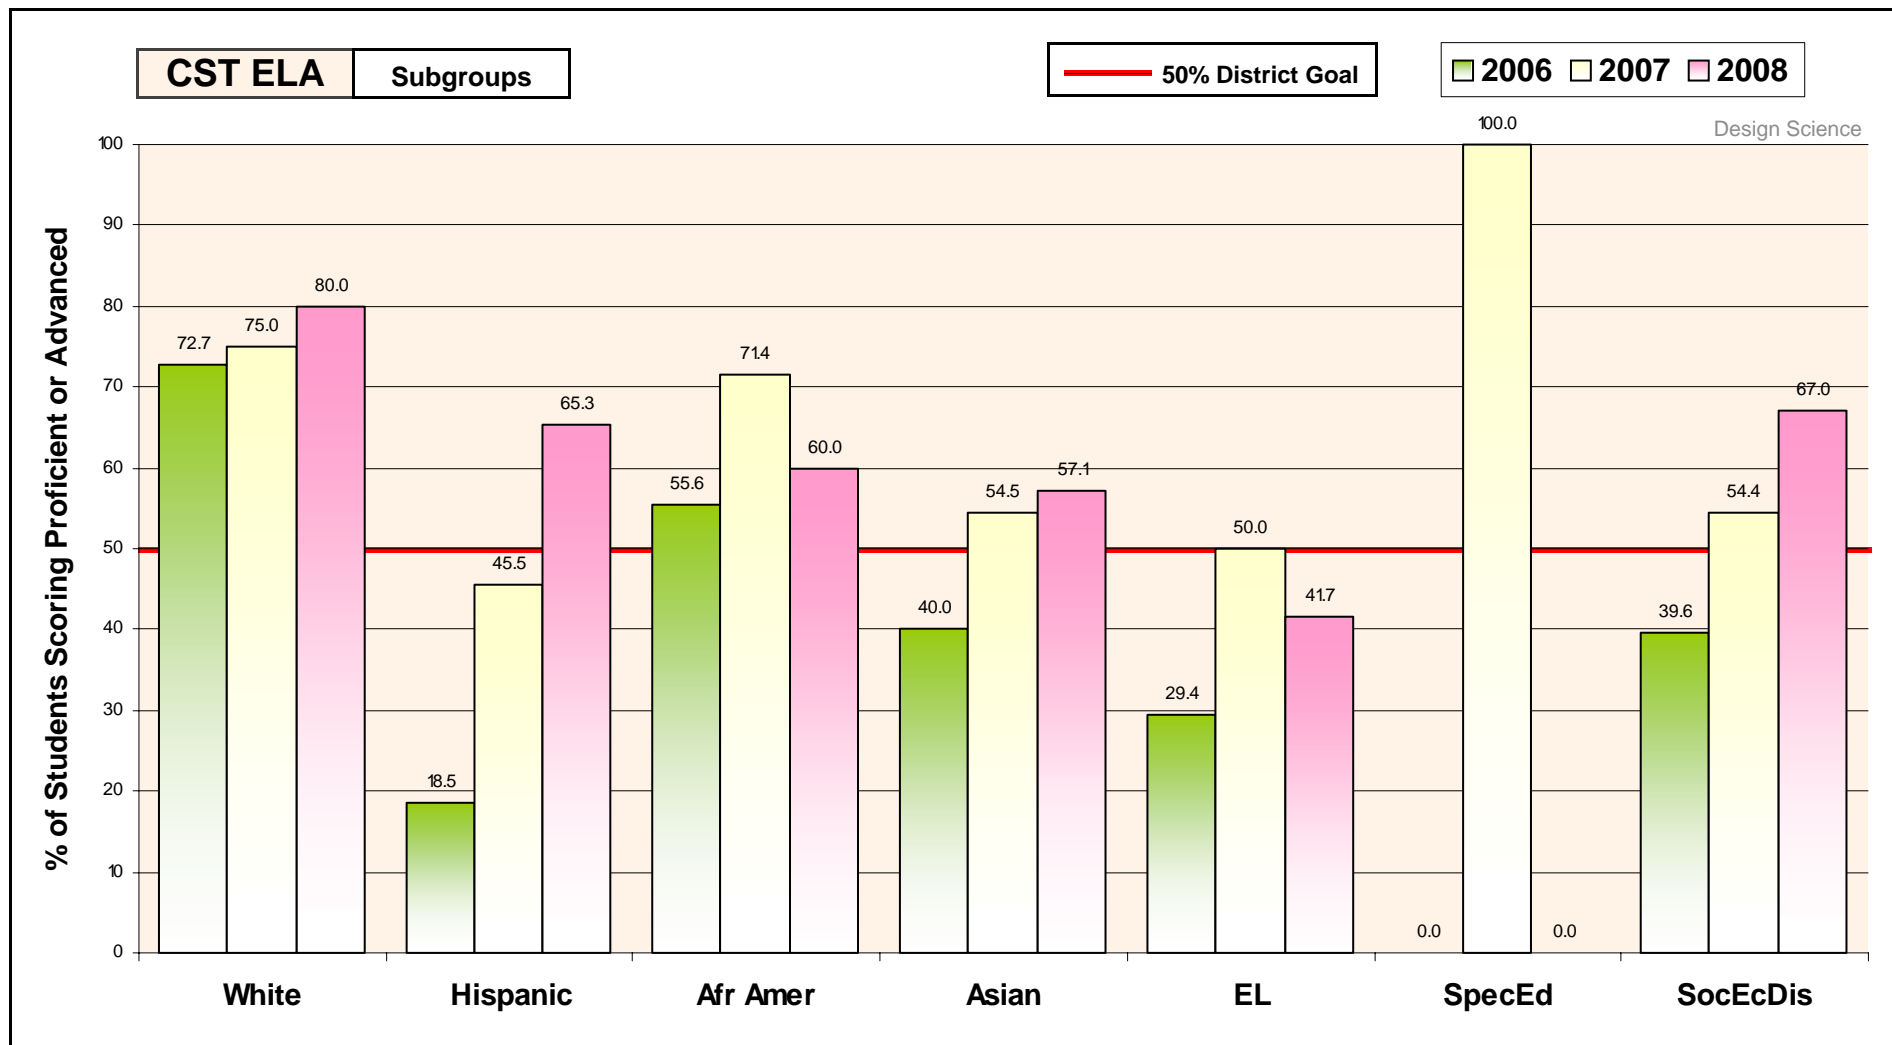

- The purpose for the CST Proficiency Charts is for schools to compare change across years. Therefore, students in grades 3-5 who took the California Modified Assessment (CMA) in 2008 are counted here as scoring not proficient. The California Department of Education (CDE) will not assign proficiency levels for this CMA in 2008.
- The chart is based on students continuously enrolled in the school since October until CST testing of the respective school year.
- CAPA & STS are excluded from the chart.

Design Science HS
(CMA Students Counted as Not Proficient)

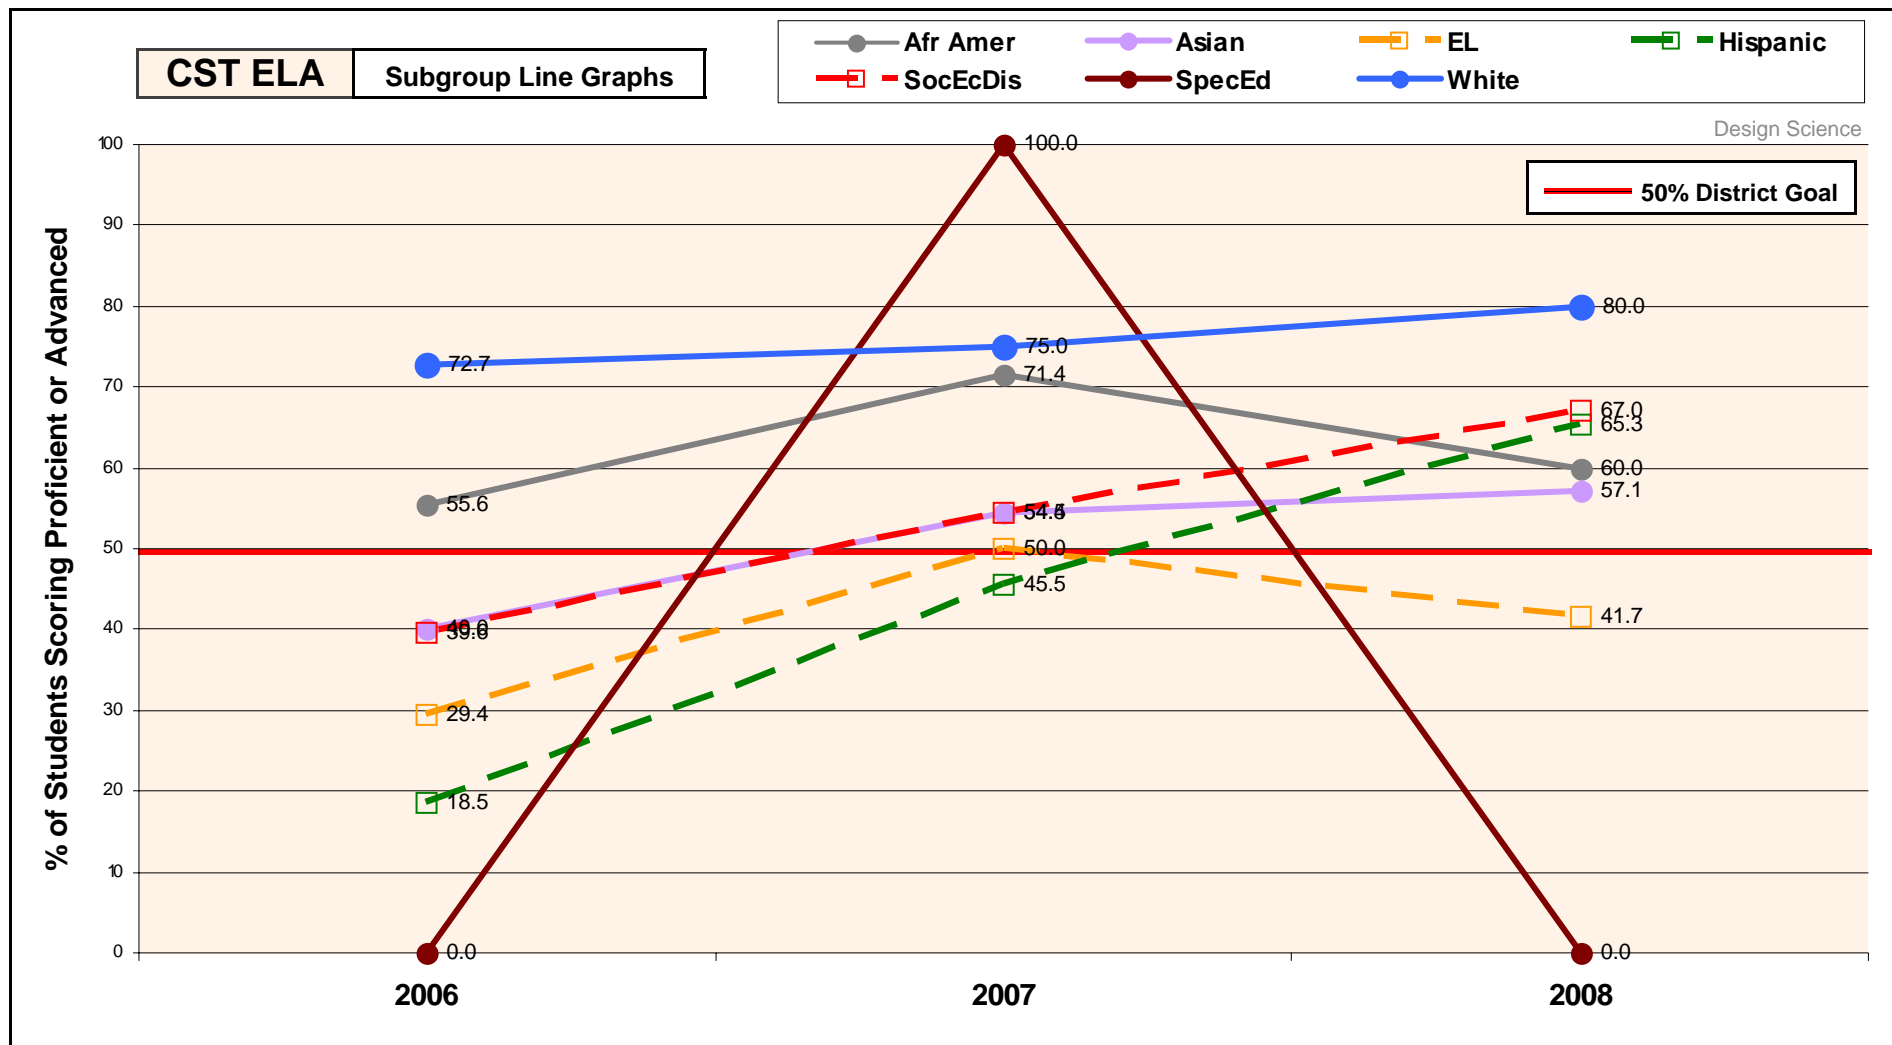

- The purpose for the CST Proficiency Charts is for schools to compare change across years. Therefore, students in grades 3-5 who took the California Modified Assessment (CMA) in 2008 are counted here as scoring not proficient. The California Department of Education (CDE) will not assign proficiency levels for this CMA in 2008.
- The chart is based on students continuously enrolled in the school since October until CST testing of the respective school year.
- CAPA & STS are excluded from the chart.

Design Science HS
(CMA Students Counted as Not Proficient)

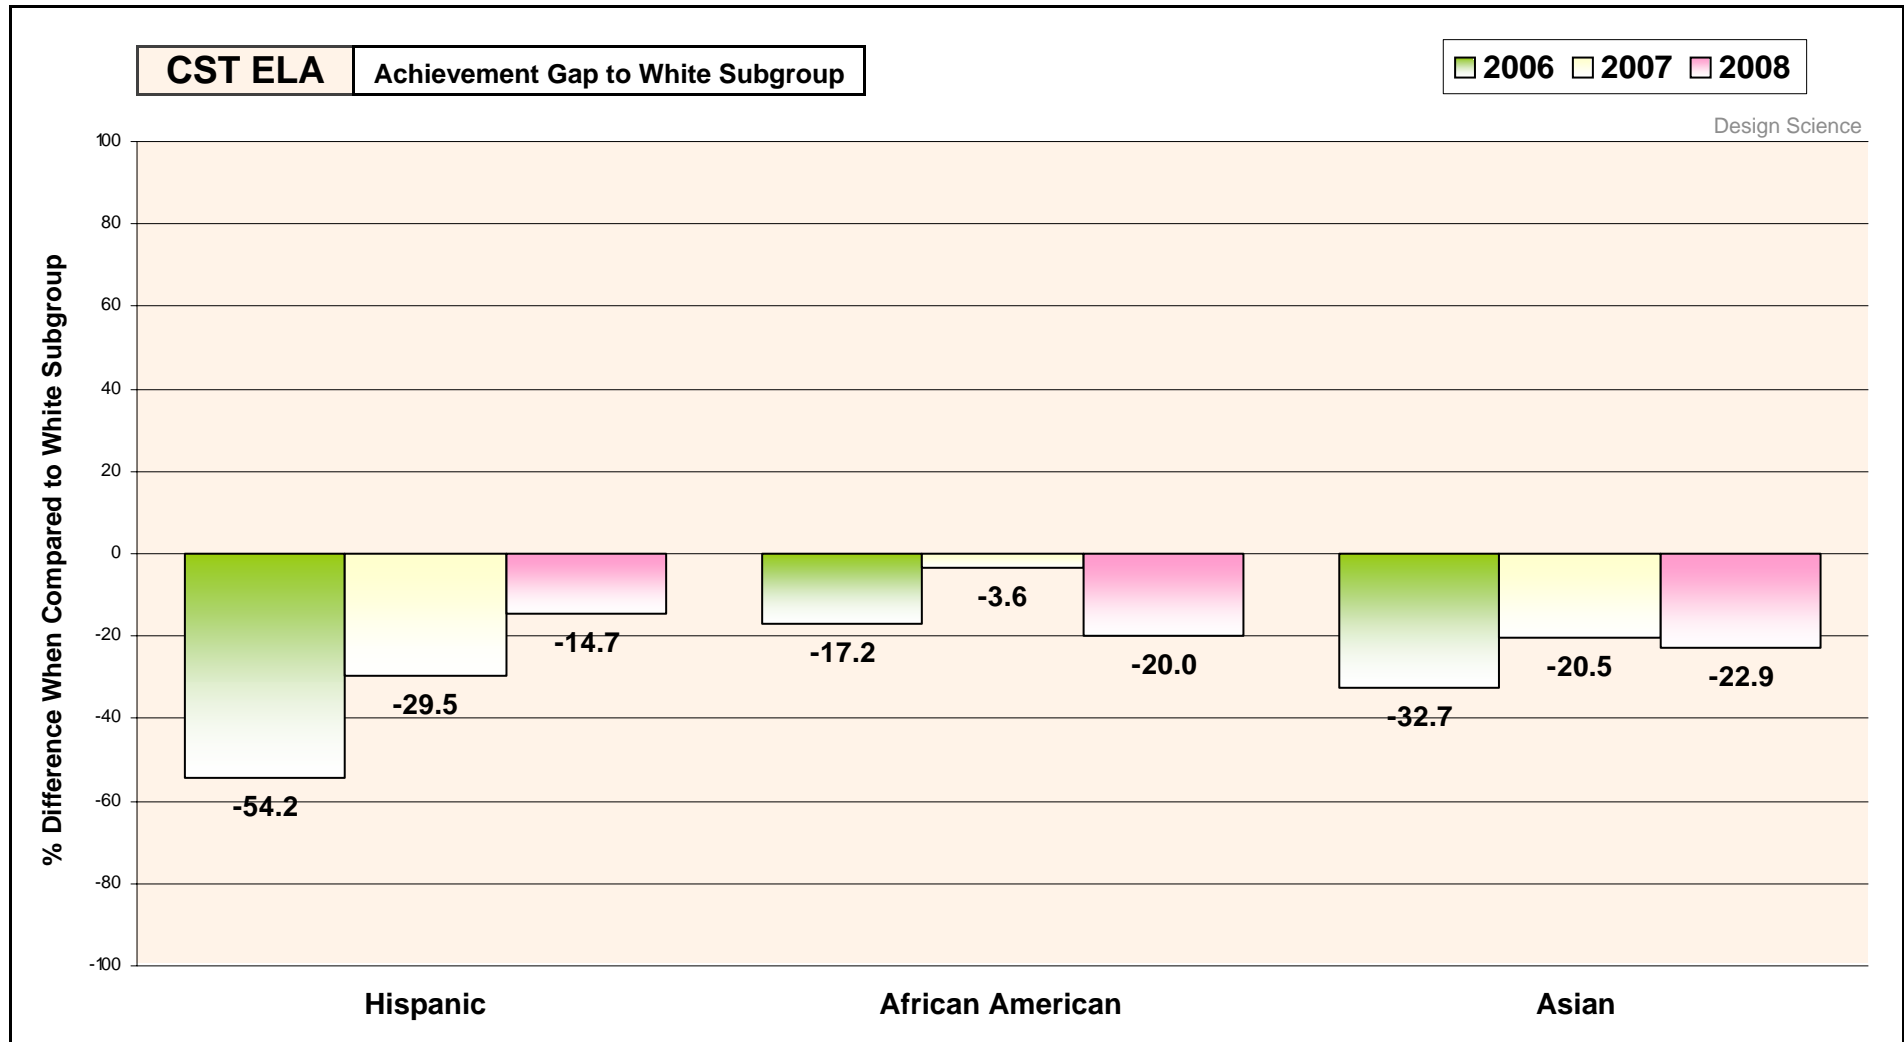

- The purpose for the CST Proficiency Charts is for schools to compare change across years. Therefore, students in grades 3-5 who took the California Modified Assessment (CMA) in 2008 are counted here as scoring not proficient. The California Department of Education (CDE) will not assign proficiency levels for this CMA in 2008.
- The chart is based on students continuously enrolled in the school since October until CST testing of the respective school year.
- CAPA & STS are excluded from the chart.

Design Science HS
(CMA Students Counted as Not Proficient)

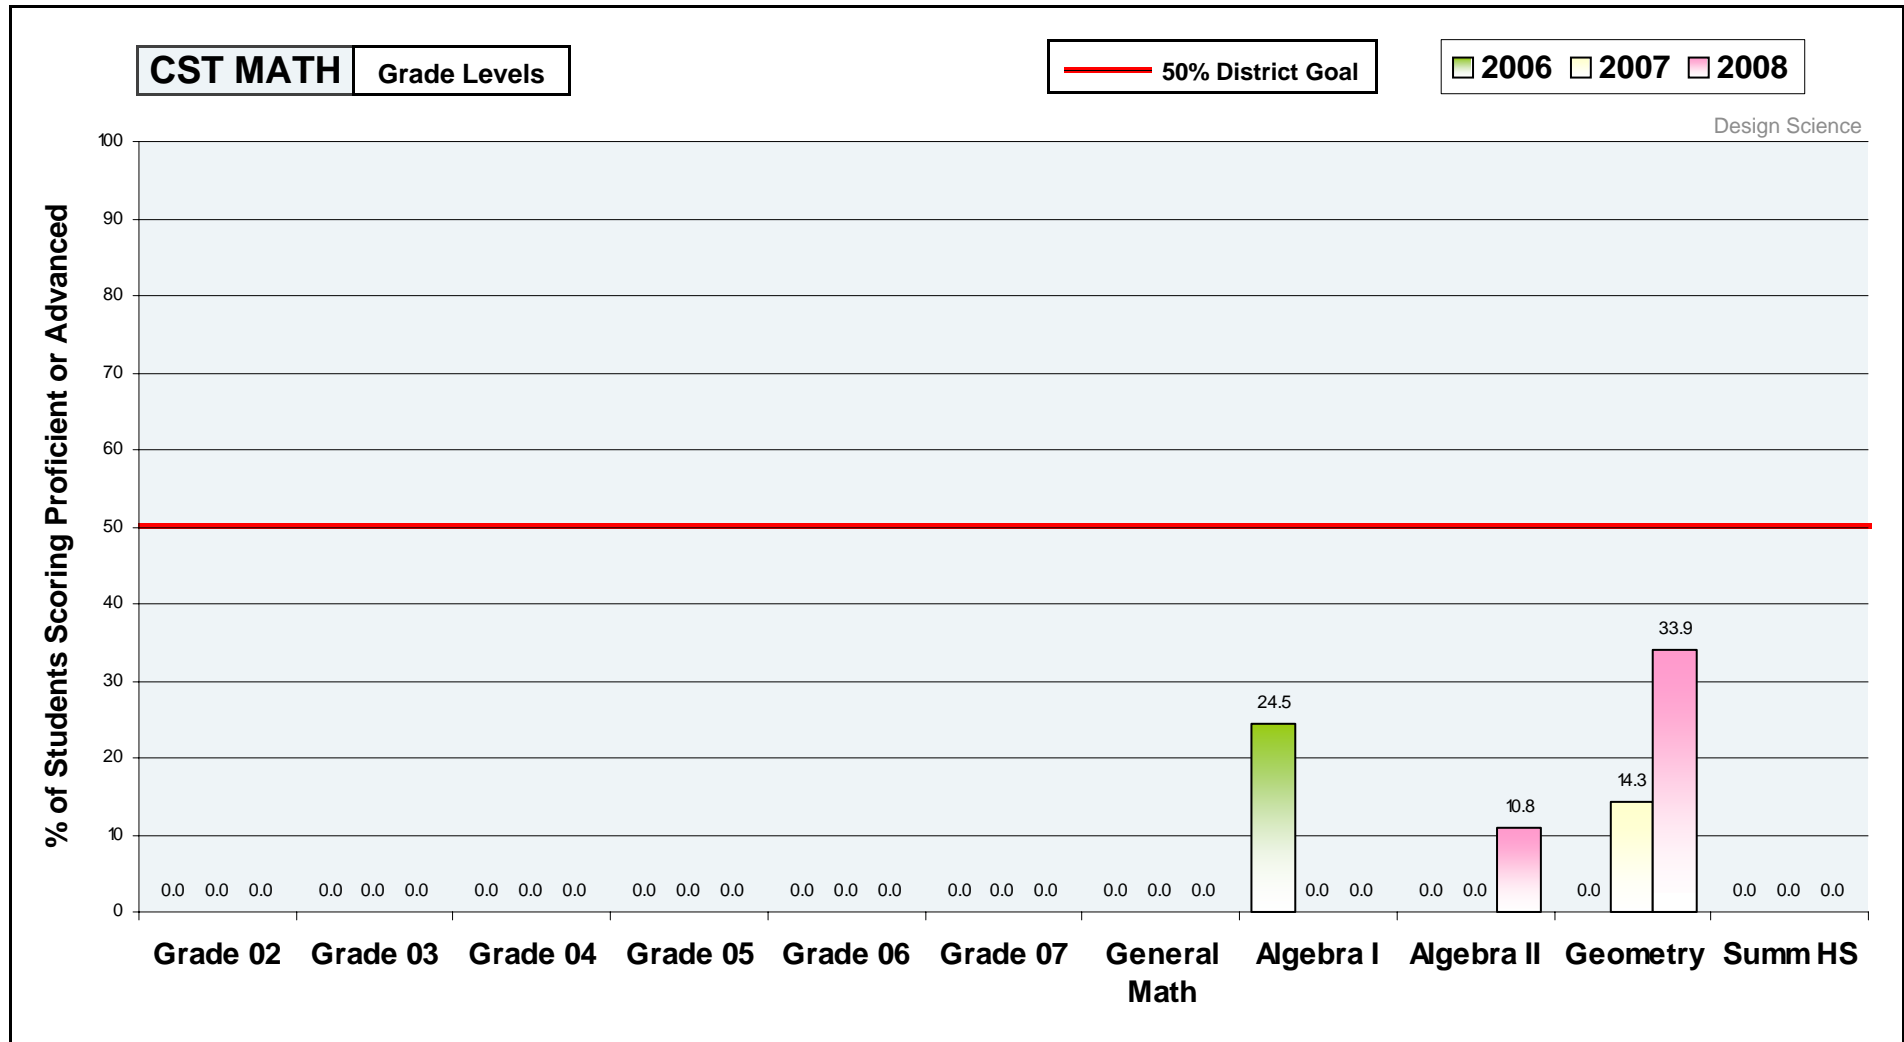

- The purpose for the CST Proficiency Charts is for schools to compare change across years. Therefore, students in grades 3-5 who took the California Modified Assessment (CMA) in 2008 are counted here as scoring not proficient. The California Department of Education (CDE) will not assign proficiency levels for this CMA in 2008.
- The chart is based on students continuously enrolled in the school since October until CST testing of the respective school year.
- CAPA & STS are excluded from the chart.

Design Science HS
(CMA Students Counted as Not Proficient)

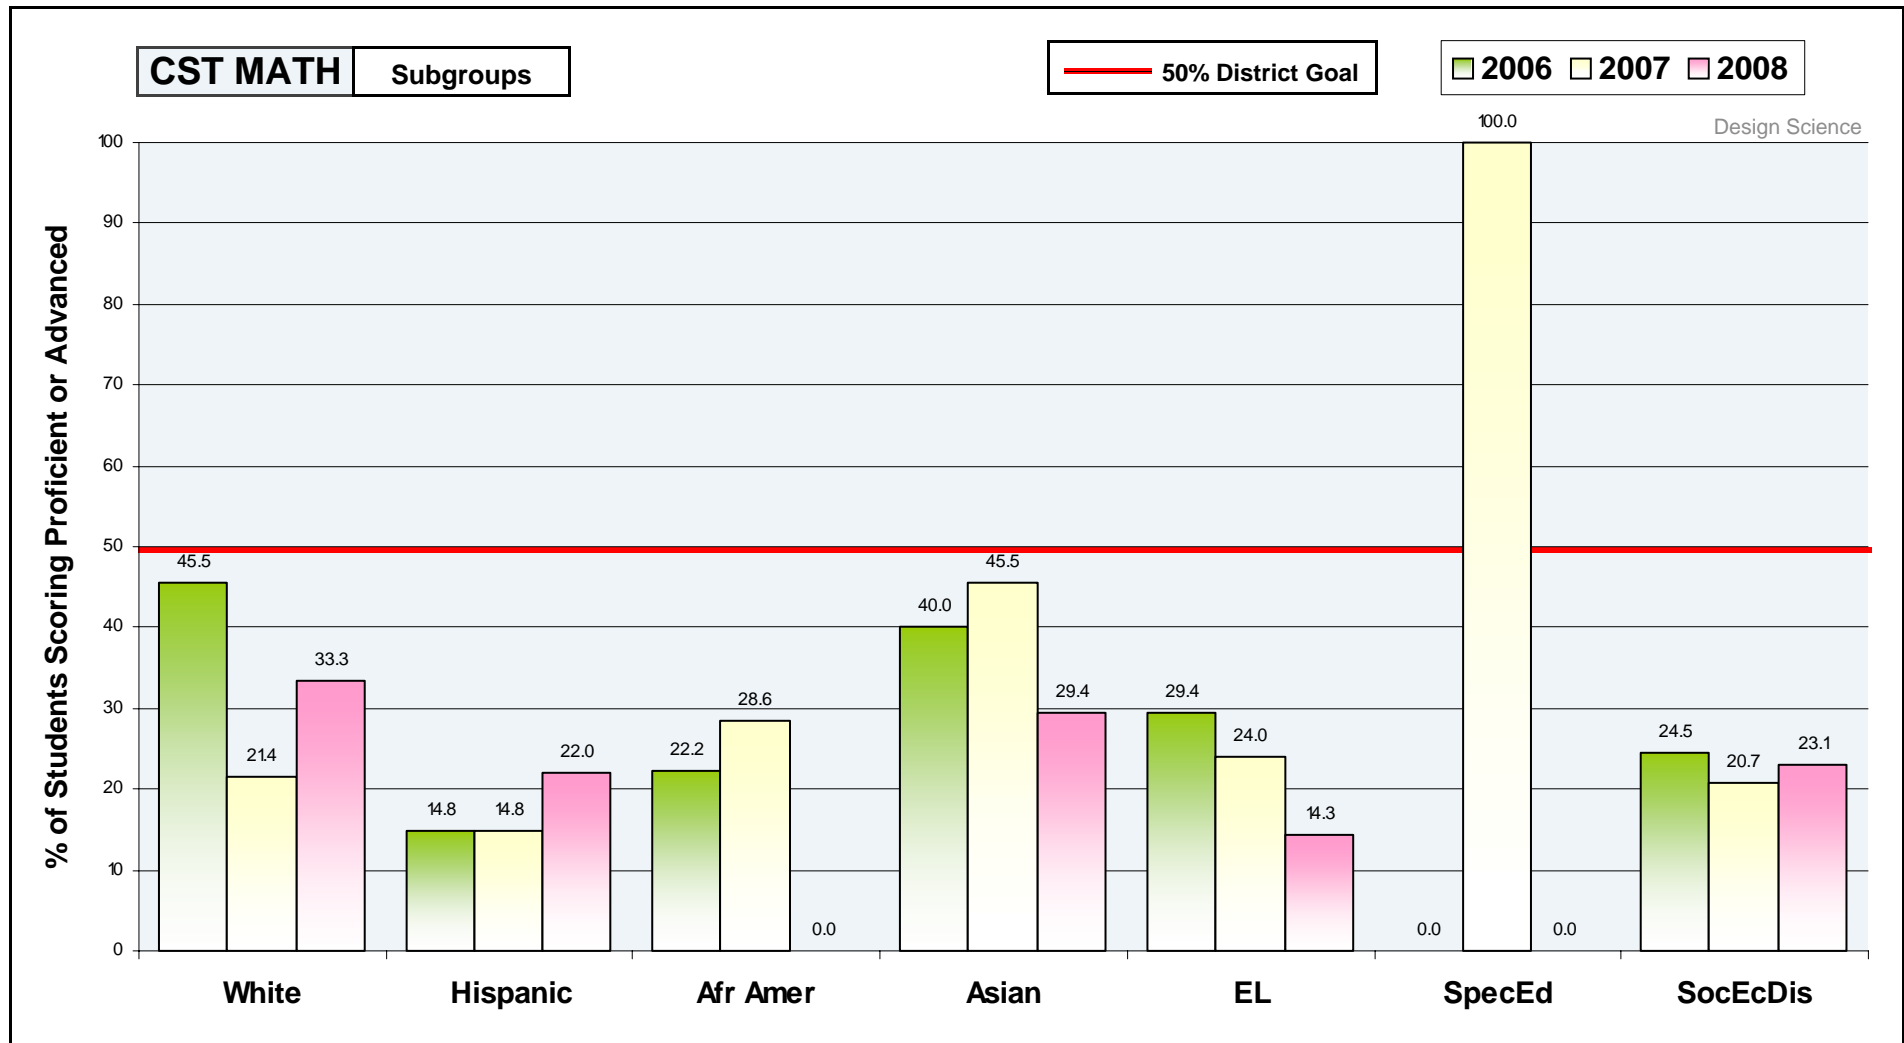

- The purpose for the CST Proficiency Charts is for schools to compare change across years. Therefore, students in grades 3-5 who took the California Modified Assessment (CMA) in 2008 are counted here as scoring not proficient. The California Department of Education (CDE) will not assign proficiency levels for this CMA in 2008.
- The chart is based on students continuously enrolled in the school since October until CST testing of the respective school year.
- CAPA & STS are excluded from the chart.

Design Science HS
(CMA Students Counted as Not Proficient)

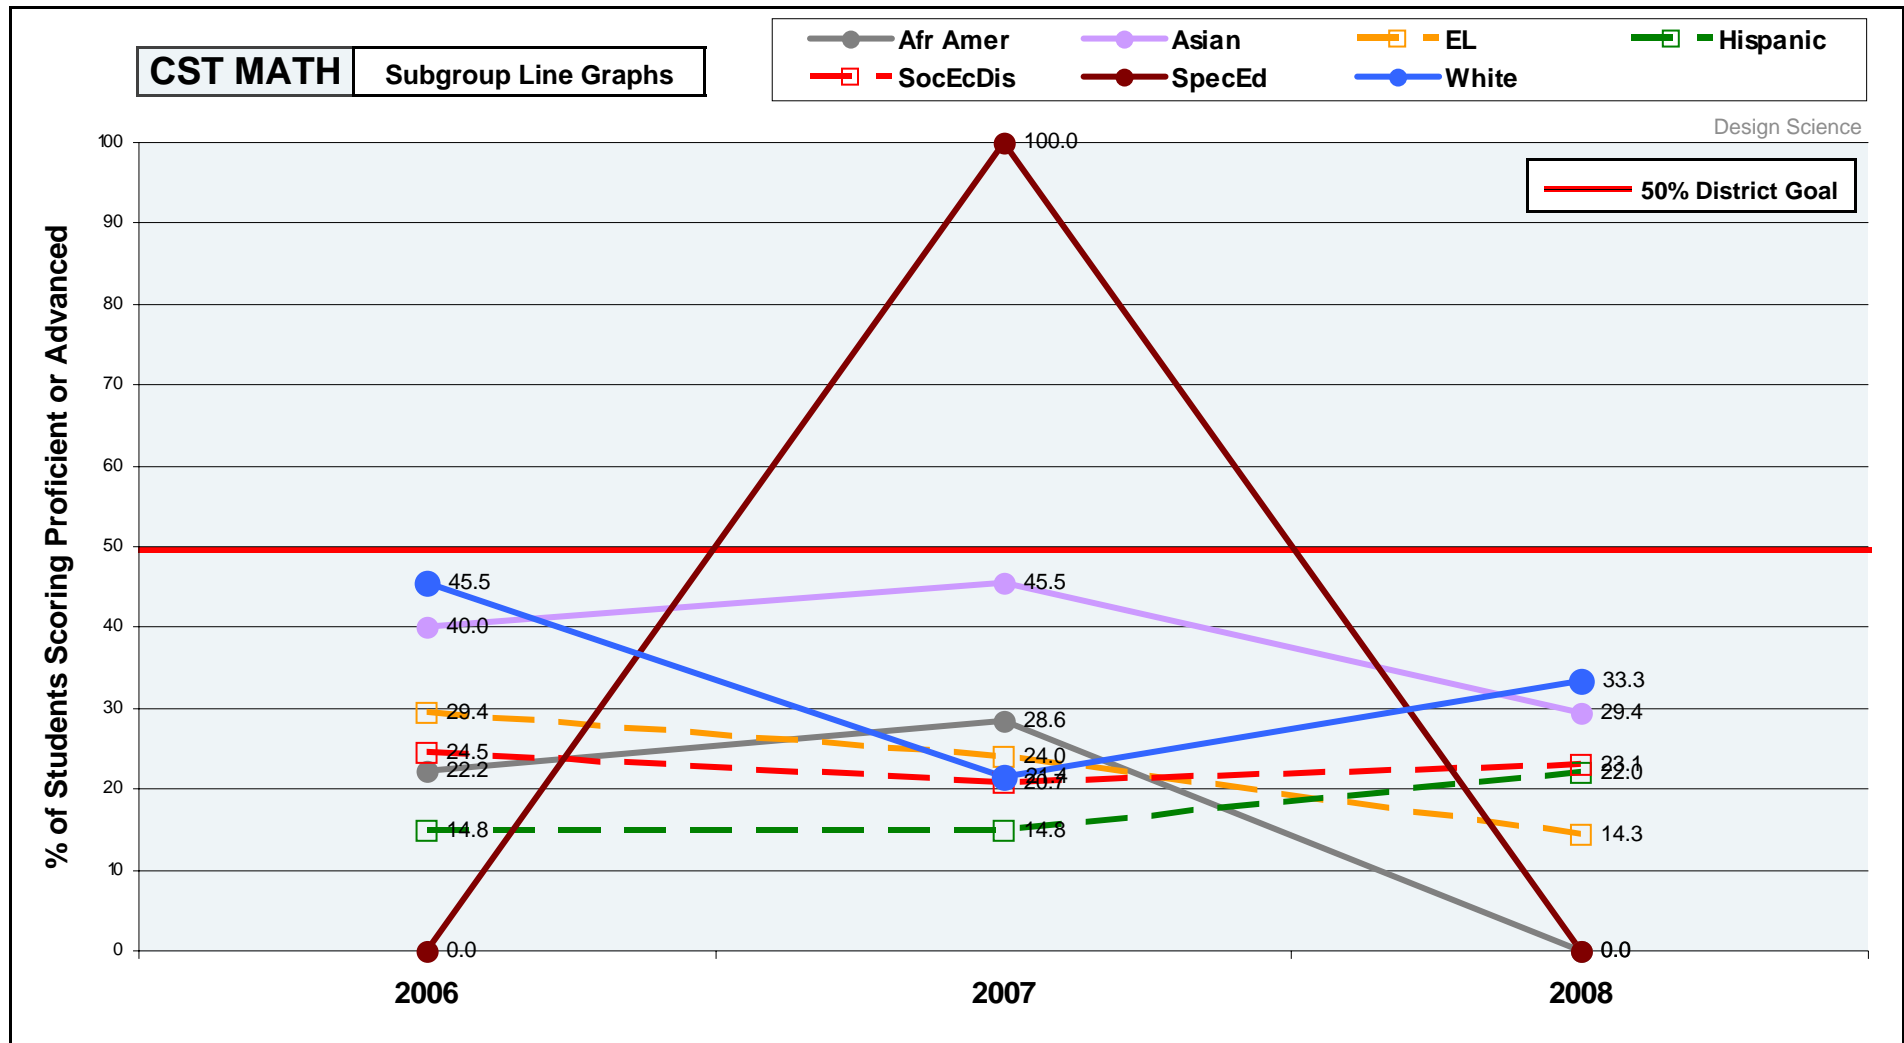

- The purpose for the CST Proficiency Charts is for schools to compare change across years. Therefore, students in grades 3-5 who took the California Modified Assessment (CMA) in 2008 are counted here as scoring not proficient. The California Department of Education (CDE) will not assign proficiency levels for this CMA in 2008.
- The chart is based on students continuously enrolled in the school since October until CST testing of the respective school year.
- CAPA & STS are excluded from the chart.

Design Science HS
(CMA Students Counted as Not Proficient)

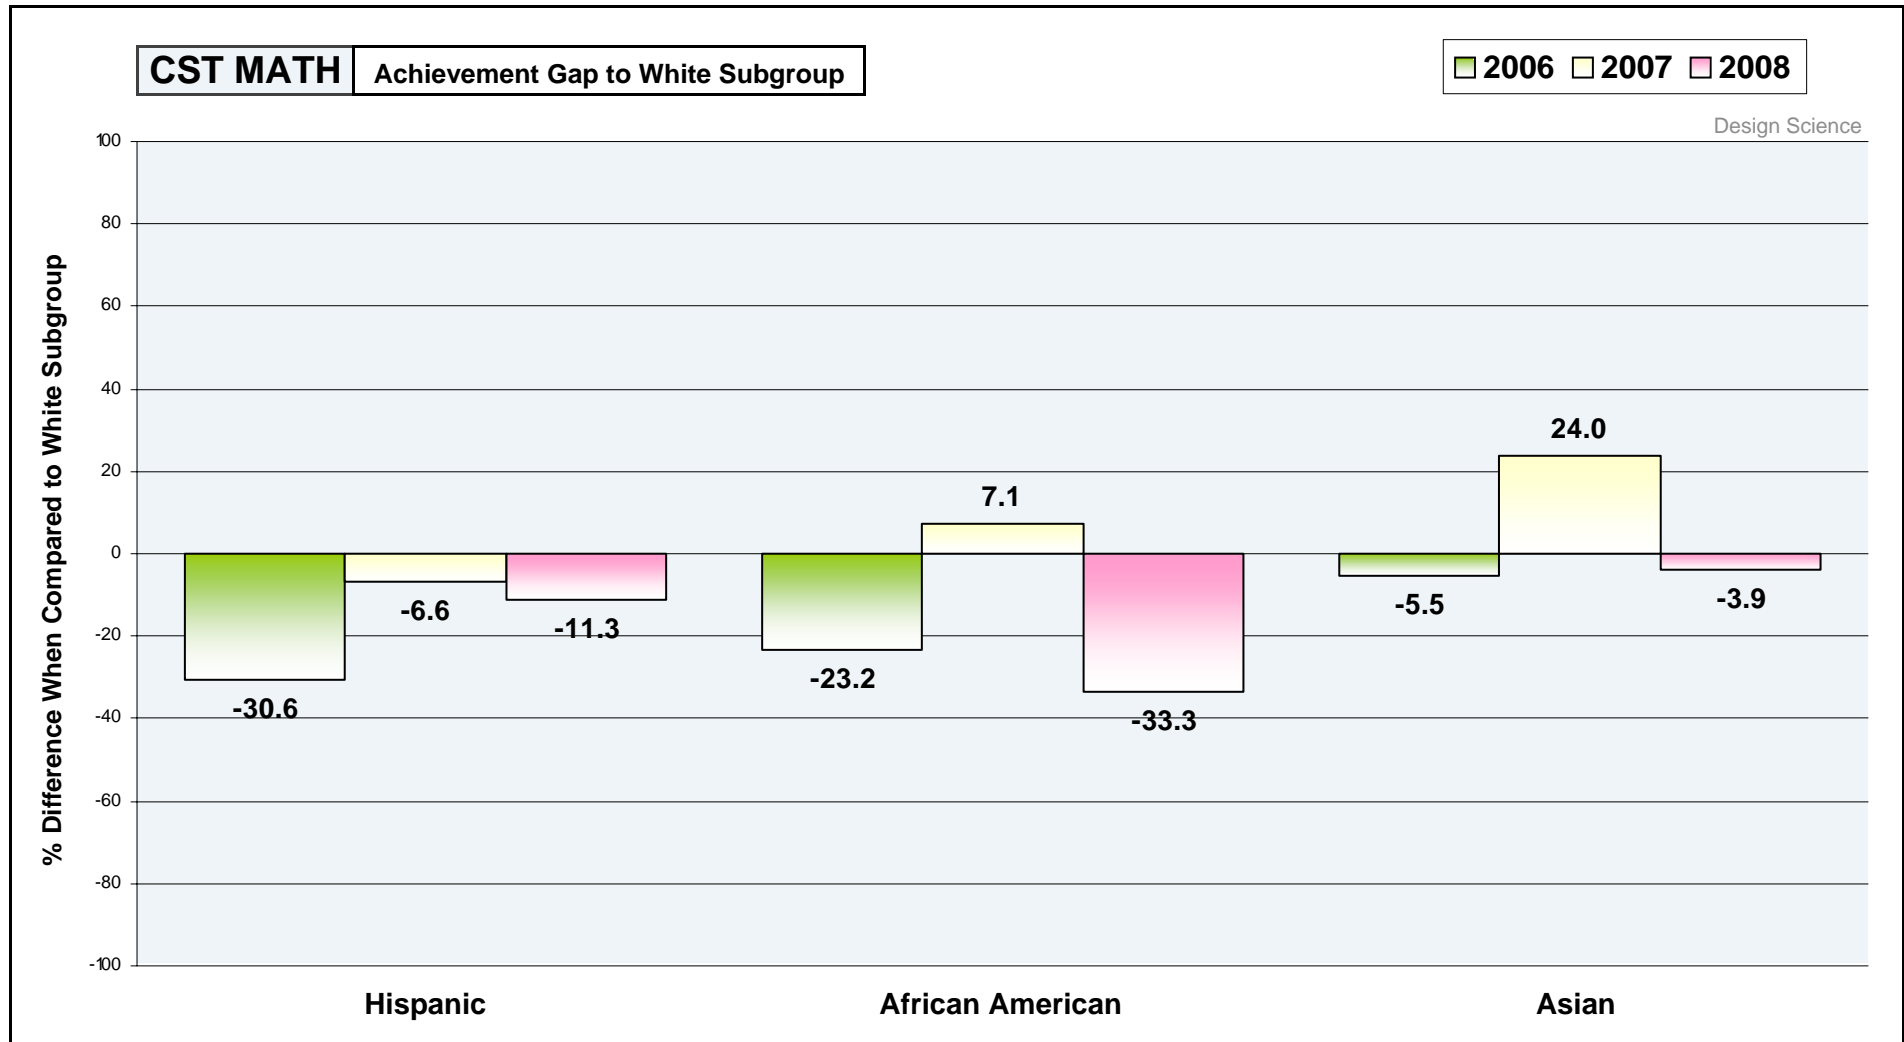

- The purpose for the CST Proficiency Charts is for schools to compare change across years. Therefore, students in grades 3-5 who took the California Modified Assessment (CMA) in 2008 are counted here as scoring not proficient. The California Department of Education (CDE) will not assign proficiency levels for this CMA in 2008.
- The chart is based on students continuously enrolled in the school since October until CST testing of the respective school year.
- CAPA & STS are excluded from the chart.

Design Science HS
(CMA Students Counted as Not Proficient)

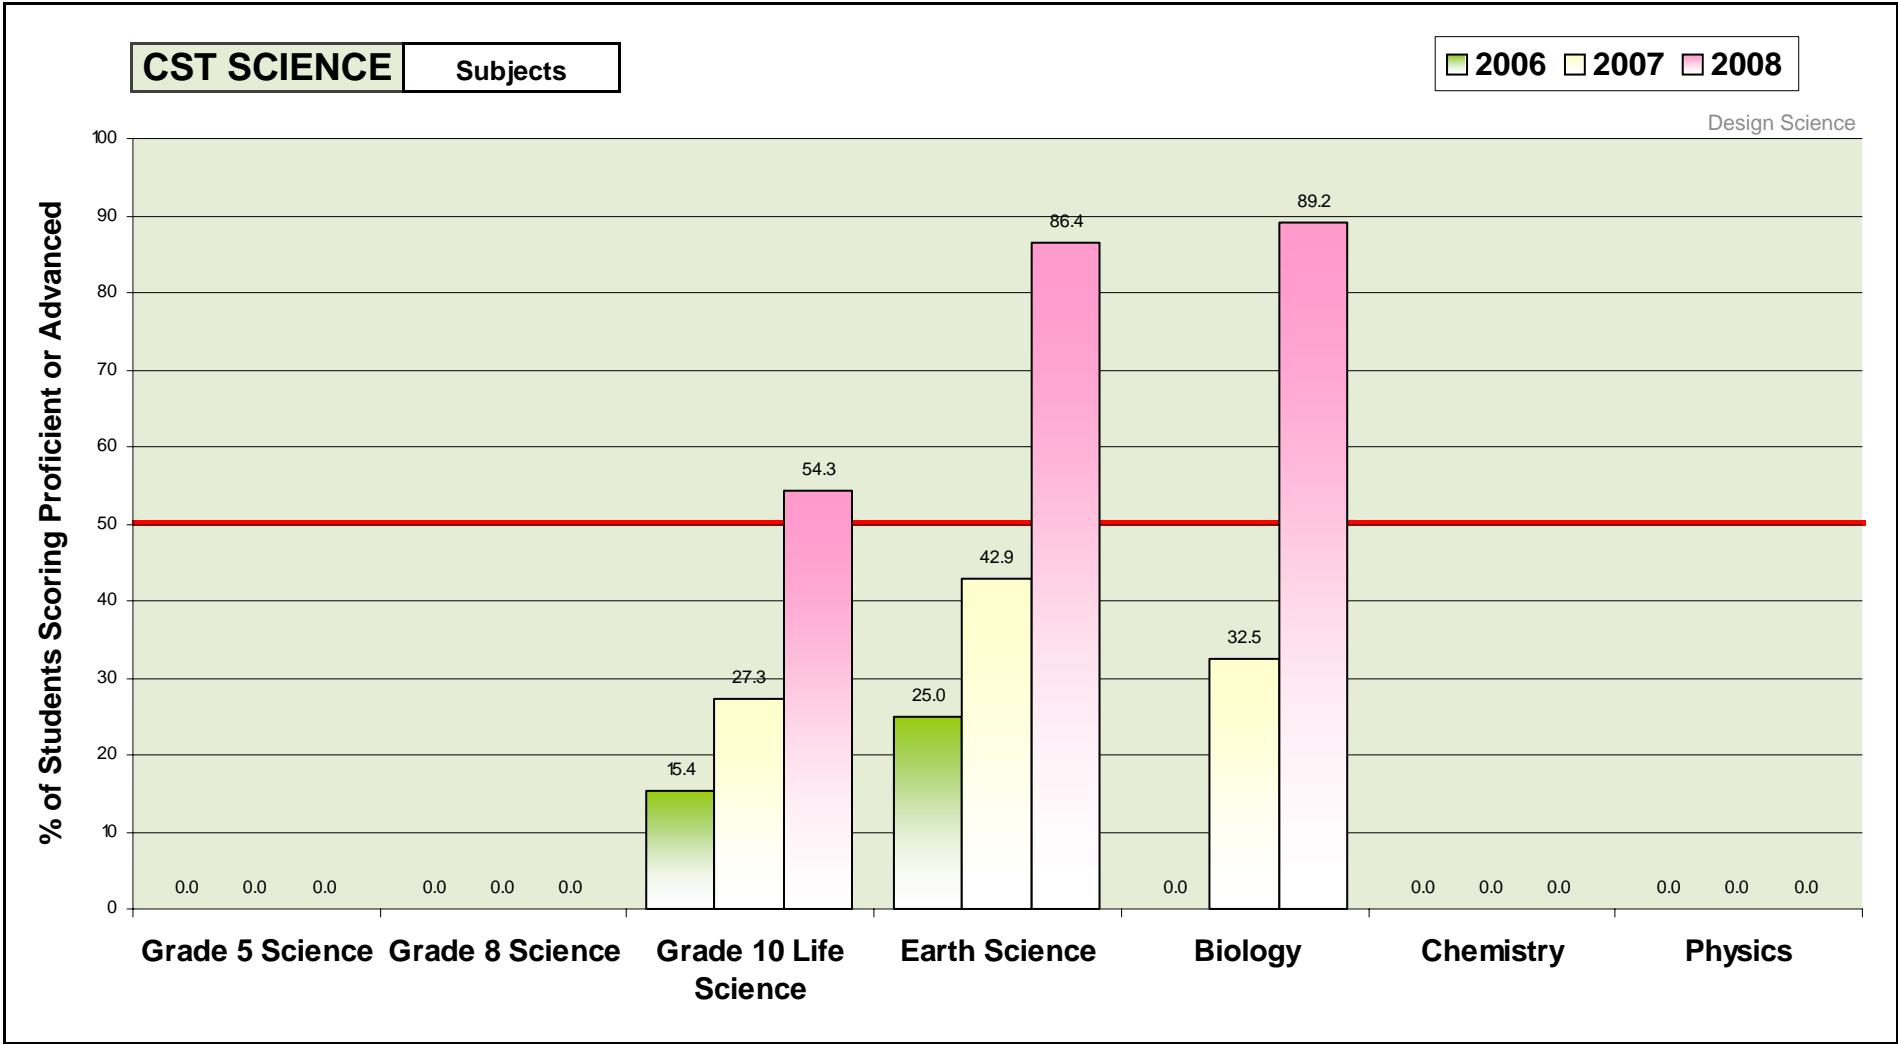

- The purpose for the CST Proficiency Charts is for schools to compare change across years. Therefore, students in grades 3-5 who took the California Modified Assessment (CMA) in 2008 are counted here as scoring not proficient. The California Department of Education (CDE) will not assign proficiency levels for this CMA in 2008.
- The chart is based on students continuously enrolled in the school since October until CST testing of the respective school year.
- CAPA & STS are excluded from the chart.

Design Science HS
(CMA Students Counted as Not Proficient)

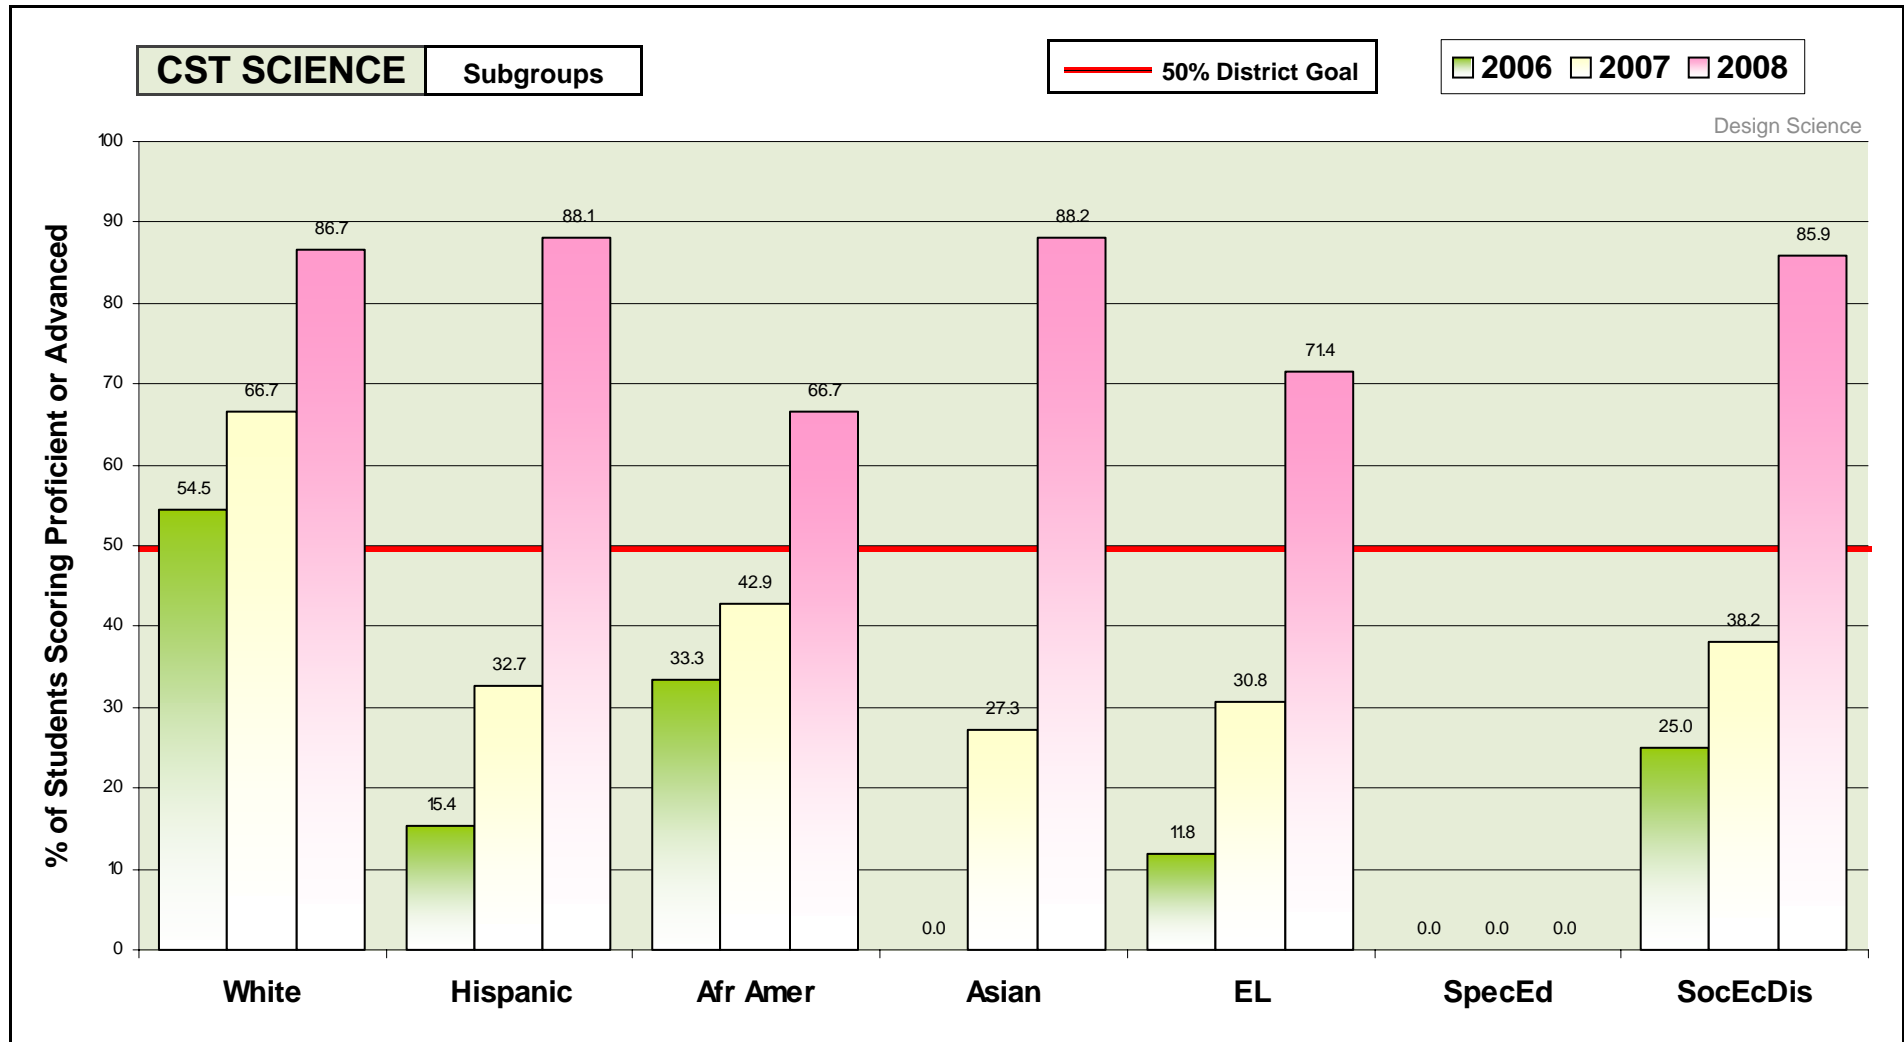

- The purpose for the CST Proficiency Charts is for schools to compare change across years. Therefore, students in grades 3-5 who took the California Modified Assessment (CMA) in 2008 are counted here as scoring not proficient. The California Department of Education (CDE) will not assign proficiency levels for this CMA in 2008.
- The chart is based on students continuously enrolled in the school since October until CST testing of the respective school year.
- CAPA & STS are excluded from the chart.

Design Science HS
(CMA Students Counted as Not Proficient)

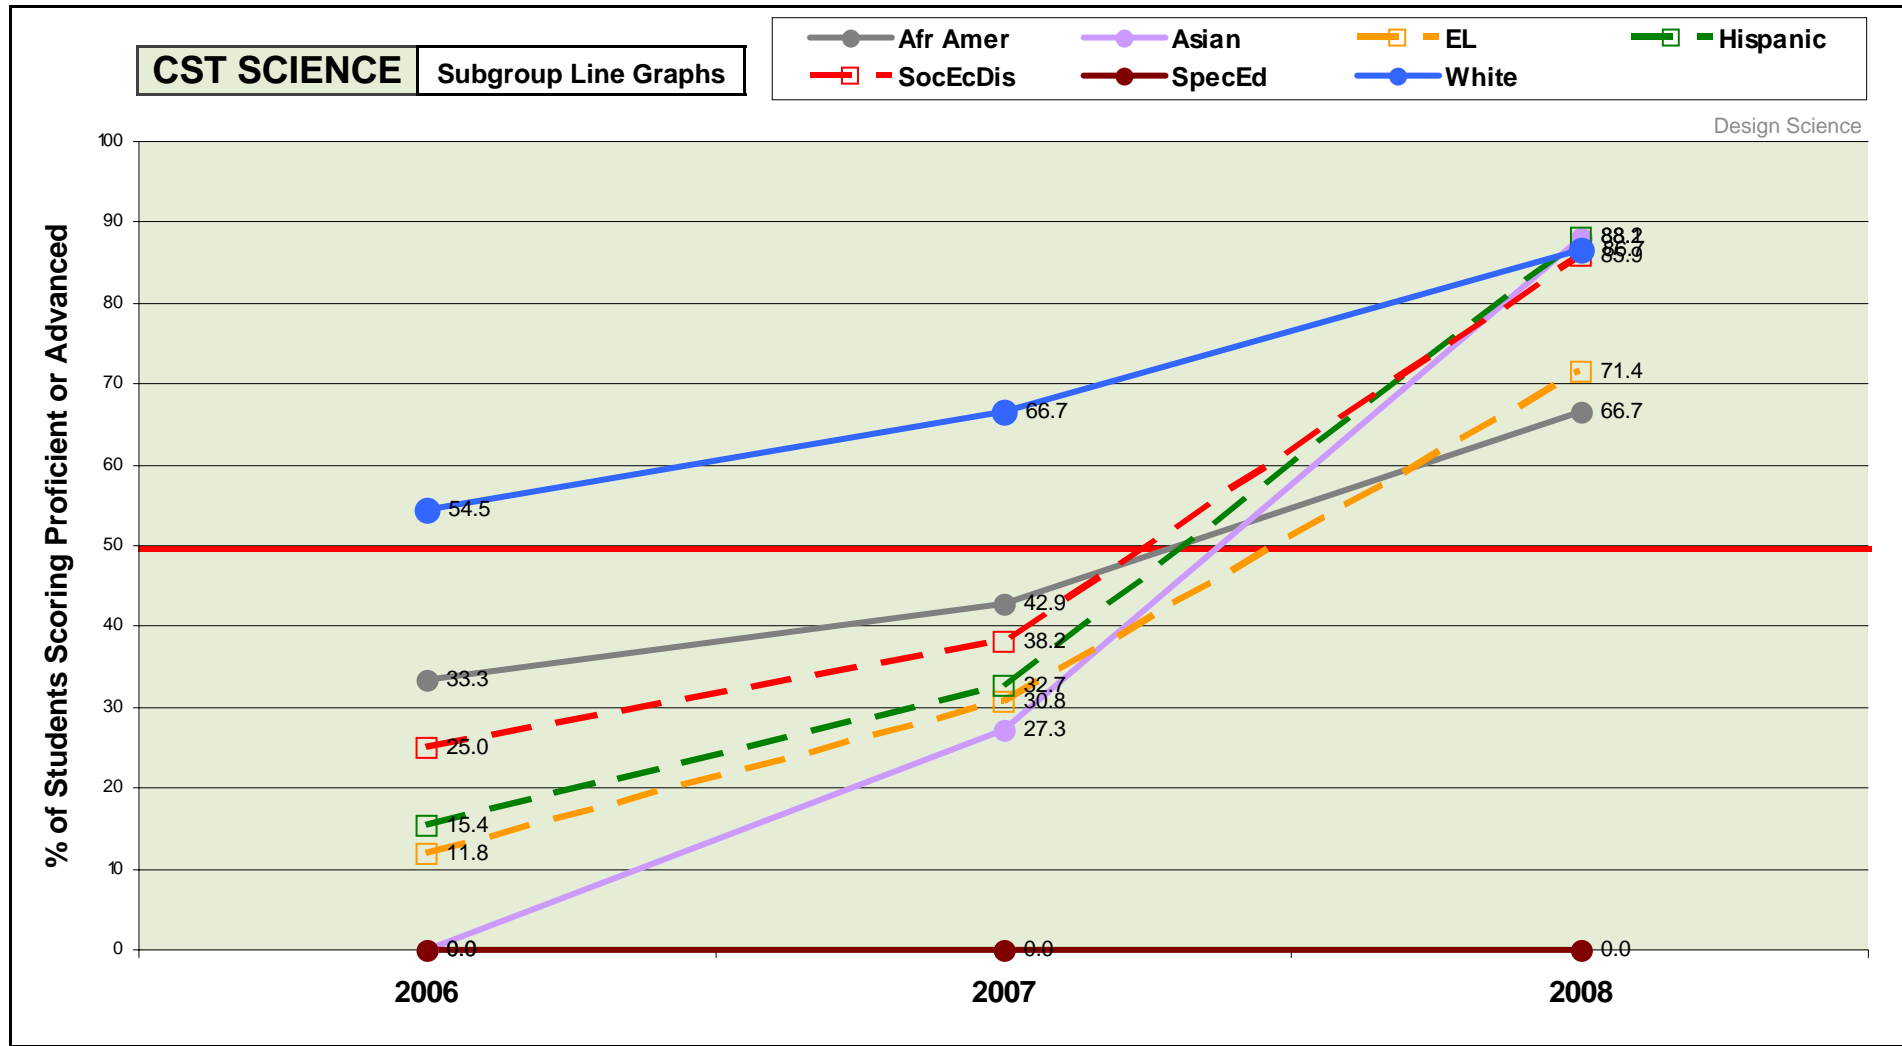

- The purpose for the CST Proficiency Charts is for schools to compare change across years. Therefore, students in grades 3-5 who took the California Modified Assessment (CMA) in 2008 are counted here as scoring not proficient. The California Department of Education (CDE) will not assign proficiency levels for this CMA in 2008.
- The chart is based on students continuously enrolled in the school since October until CST testing of the respective school year.
- CAPA & STS are excluded from the chart.

Design Science HS
(CMA Students Counted as Not Proficient)

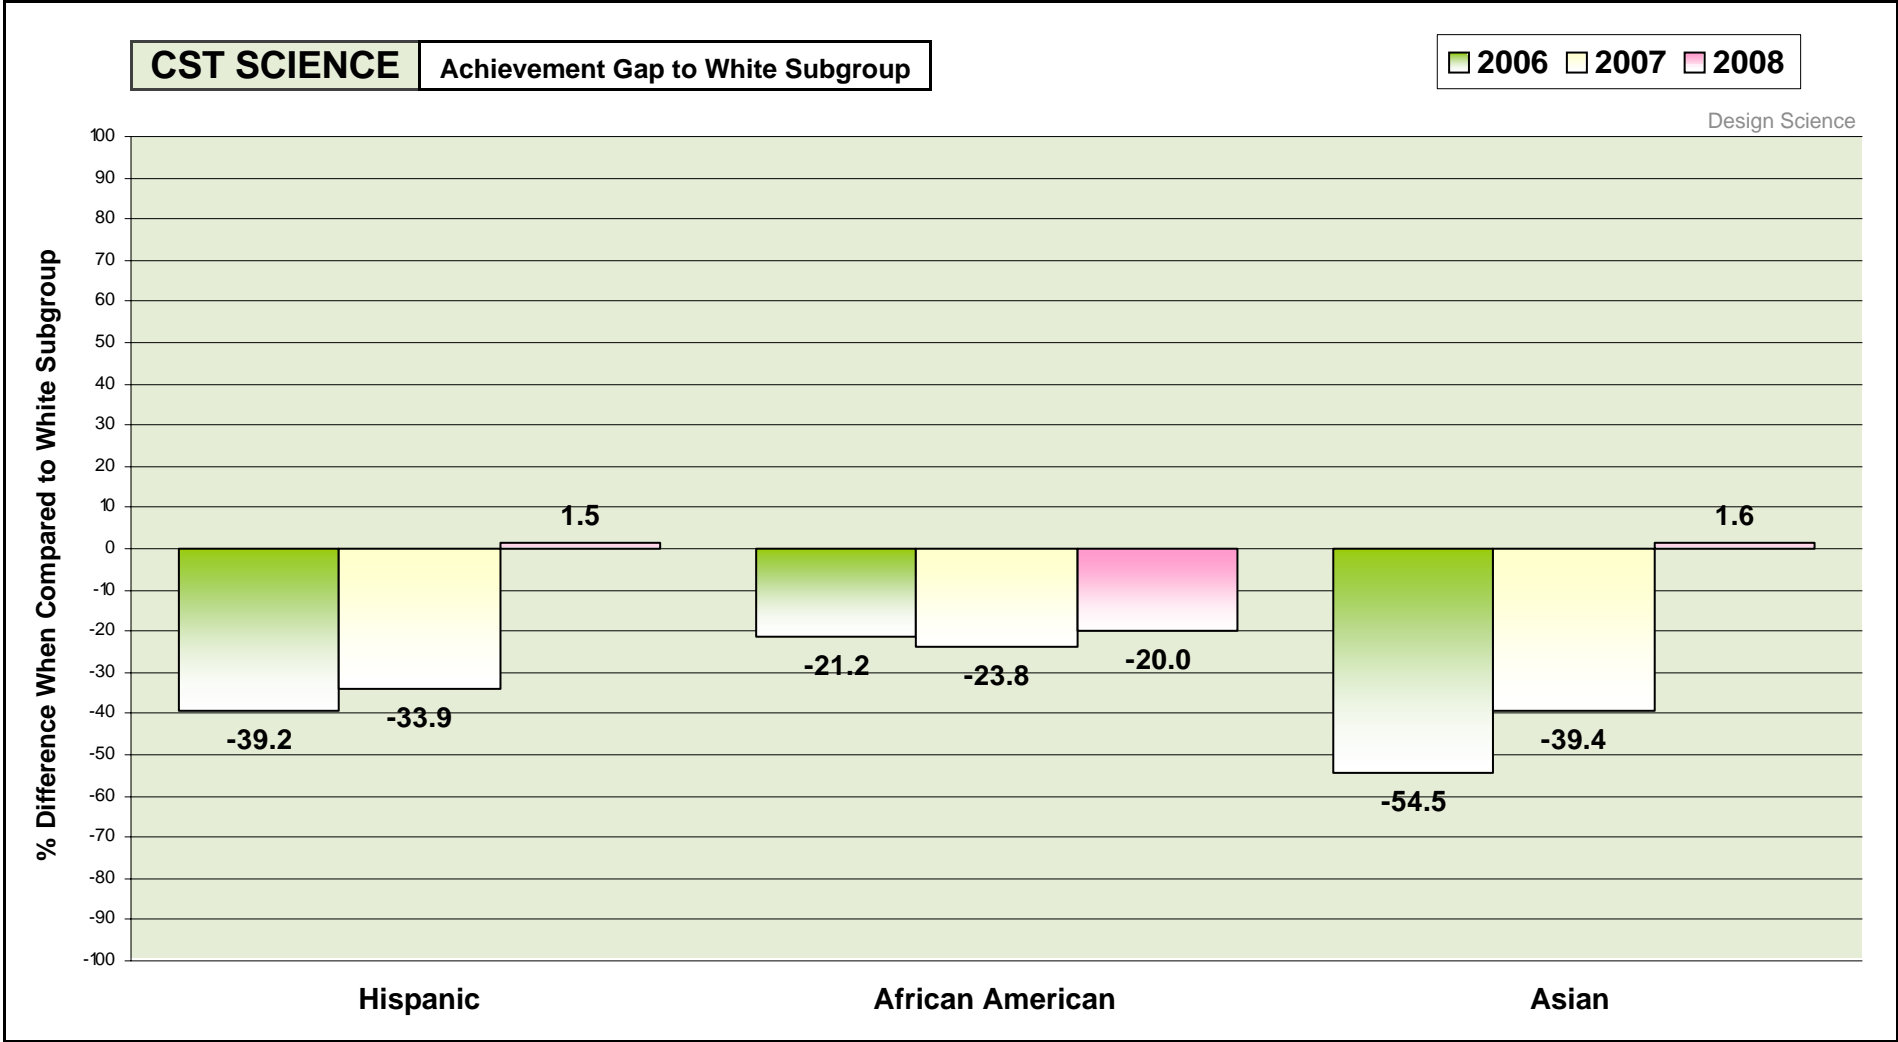

- The purpose for the CST Proficiency Charts is for schools to compare change across years. Therefore, students in grades 3-5 who took the California Modified Assessment (CMA) in 2008 are counted here as scoring not proficient. The California Department of Education (CDE) will not assign proficiency levels for this CMA in 2008.
- The chart is based on students continuously enrolled in the school since October until CST testing of the respective school year.
- CAPA & STS are excluded from the chart.

Design Science HS
(CMA Students Counted as Not Proficient)

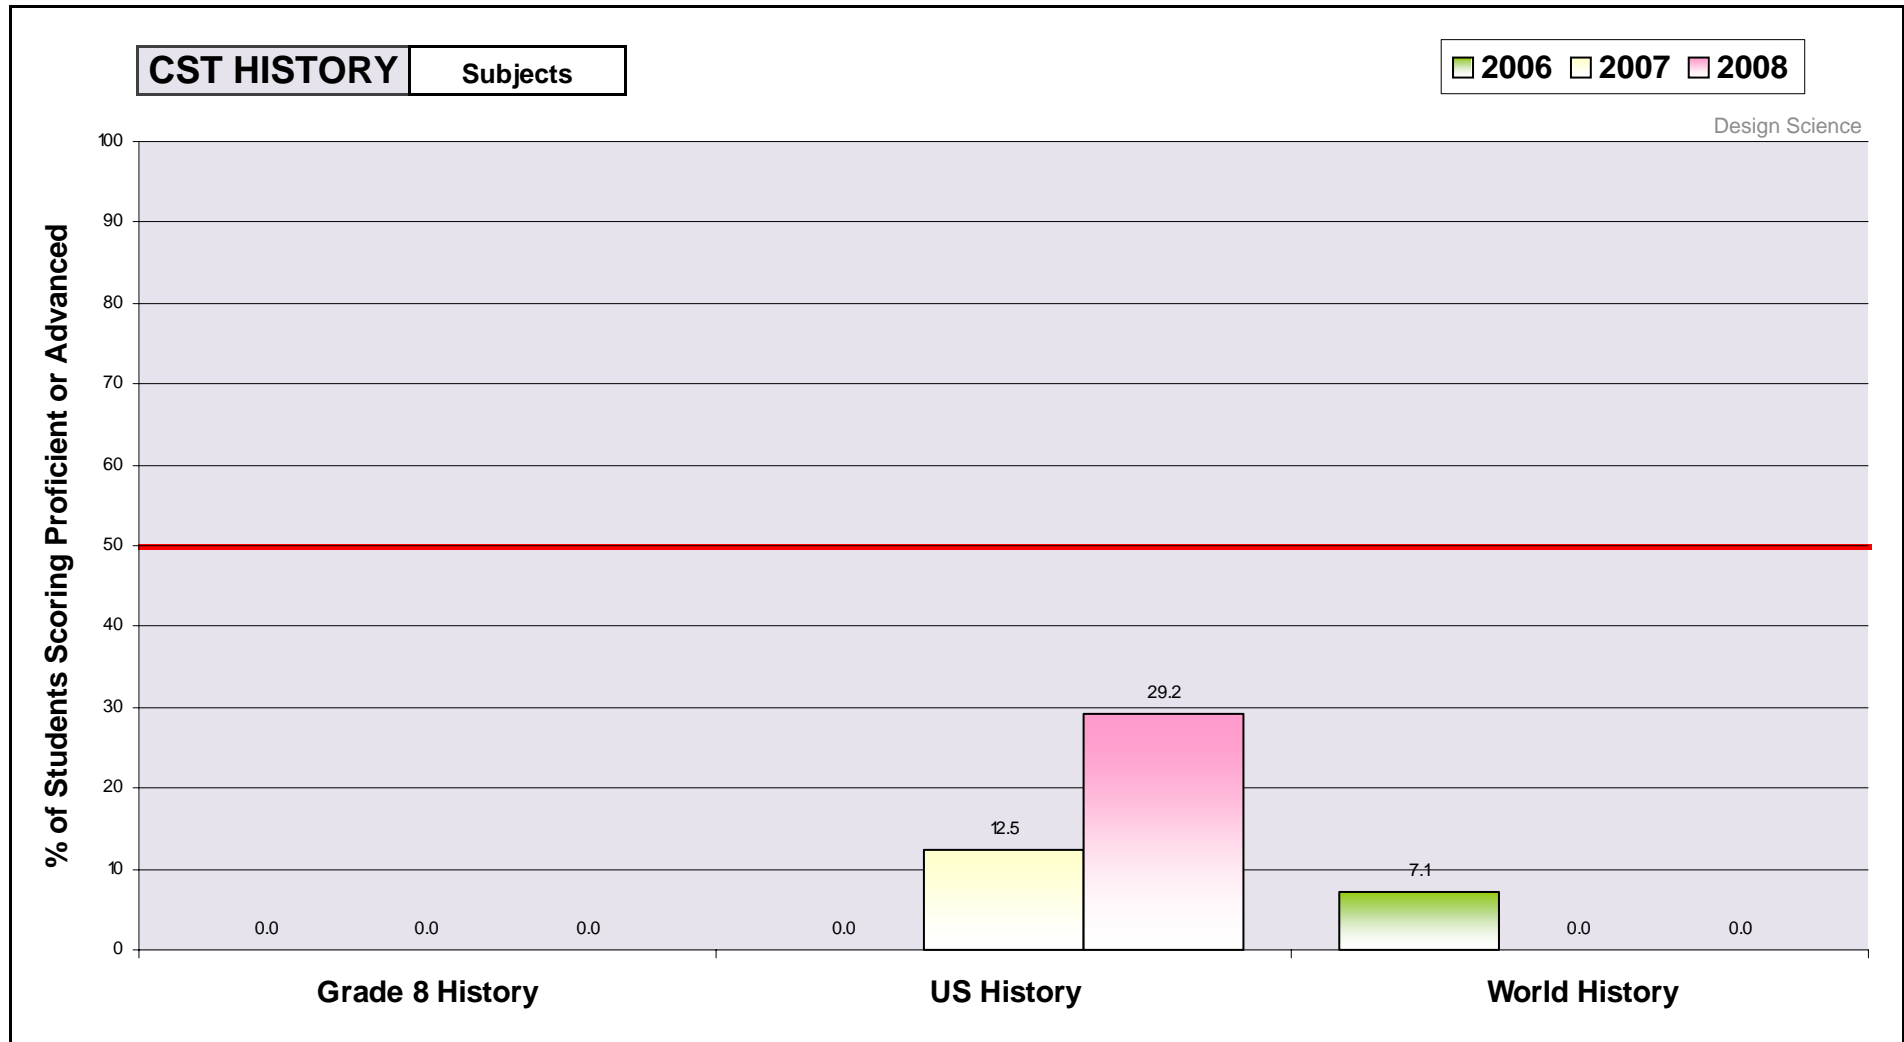

- The purpose for the CST Proficiency Charts is for schools to compare change across years. Therefore, students in grades 3-5 who took the California Modified Assessment (CMA) in 2008 are counted here as scoring not proficient. The California Department of Education (CDE) will not assign proficiency levels for this CMA in 2008.
- The chart is based on students continuously enrolled in the school since October until CST testing of the respective school year.
- CAPA & STS are excluded from the chart.

Design Science HS
(CMA Students Counted as Not Proficient)

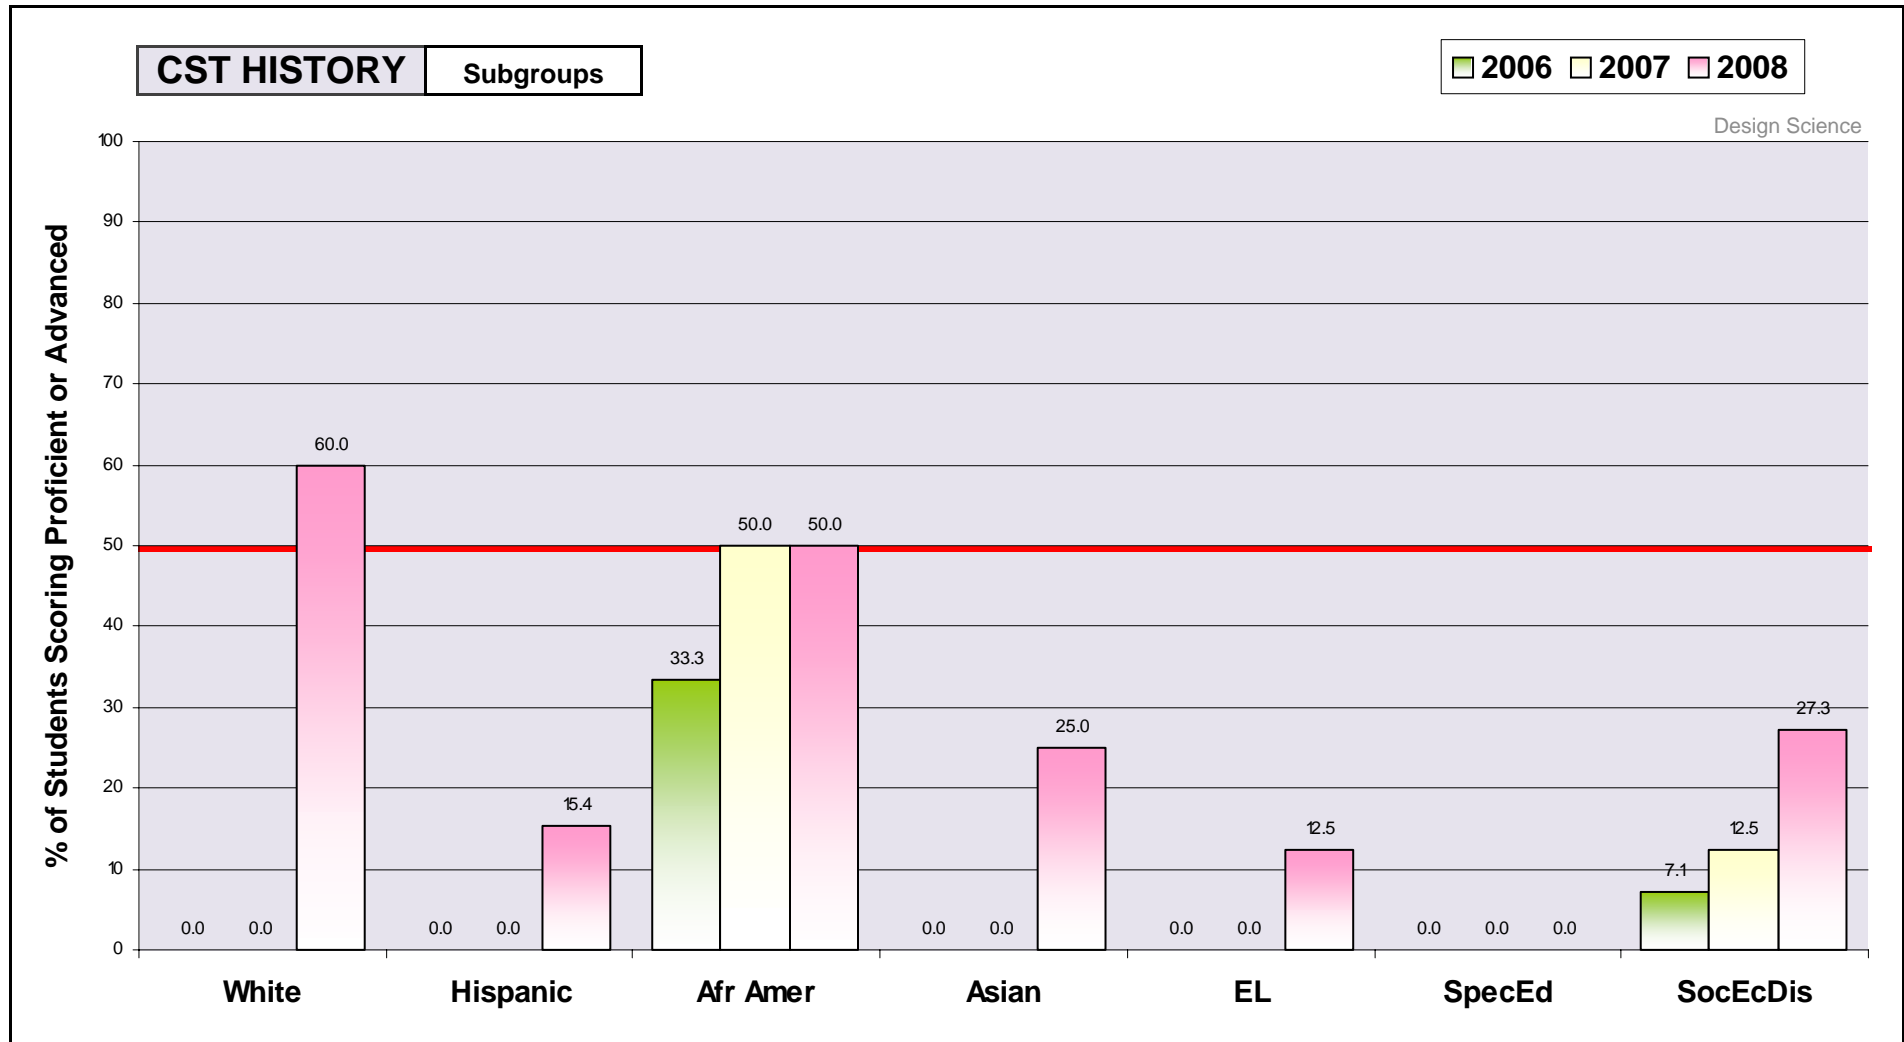

- The purpose for the CST Proficiency Charts is for schools to compare change across years. Therefore, students in grades 3-5 who took the California Modified Assessment (CMA) in 2008 are counted here as scoring not proficient. The California Department of Education (CDE) will not assign proficiency levels for this CMA in 2008.
- The chart is based on students continuously enrolled in the school since October until CST testing of the respective school year.
- CAPA & STS are excluded from the chart.

Design Science HS
(CMA Students Counted as Not Proficient)

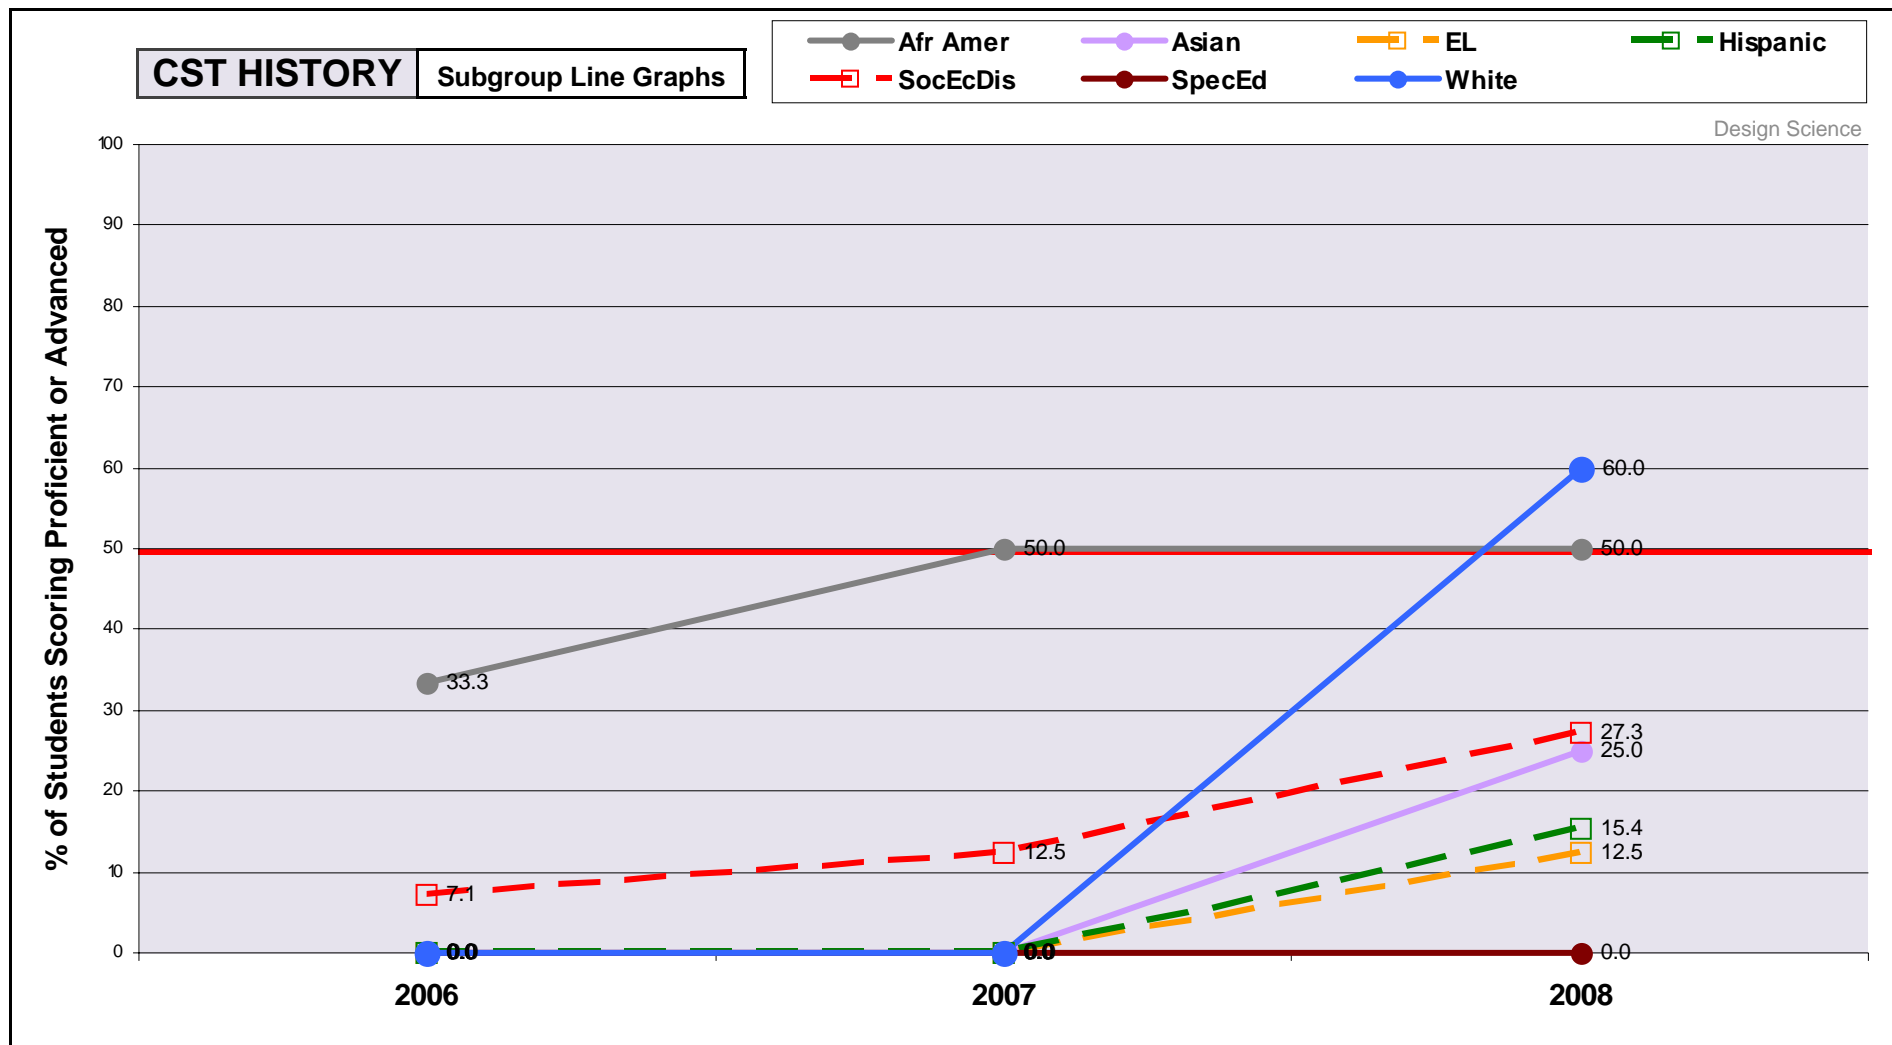

- The purpose for the CST Proficiency Charts is for schools to compare change across years. Therefore, students in grades 3-5 who took the California Modified Assessment (CMA) in 2008 are counted here as scoring not proficient. The California Department of Education (CDE) will not assign proficiency levels for this CMA in 2008.
- The chart is based on students continuously enrolled in the school since October until CST testing of the respective school year.
- CAPA & STS are excluded from the chart.

Design Science HS
(CMA Students Counted as Not Proficient)

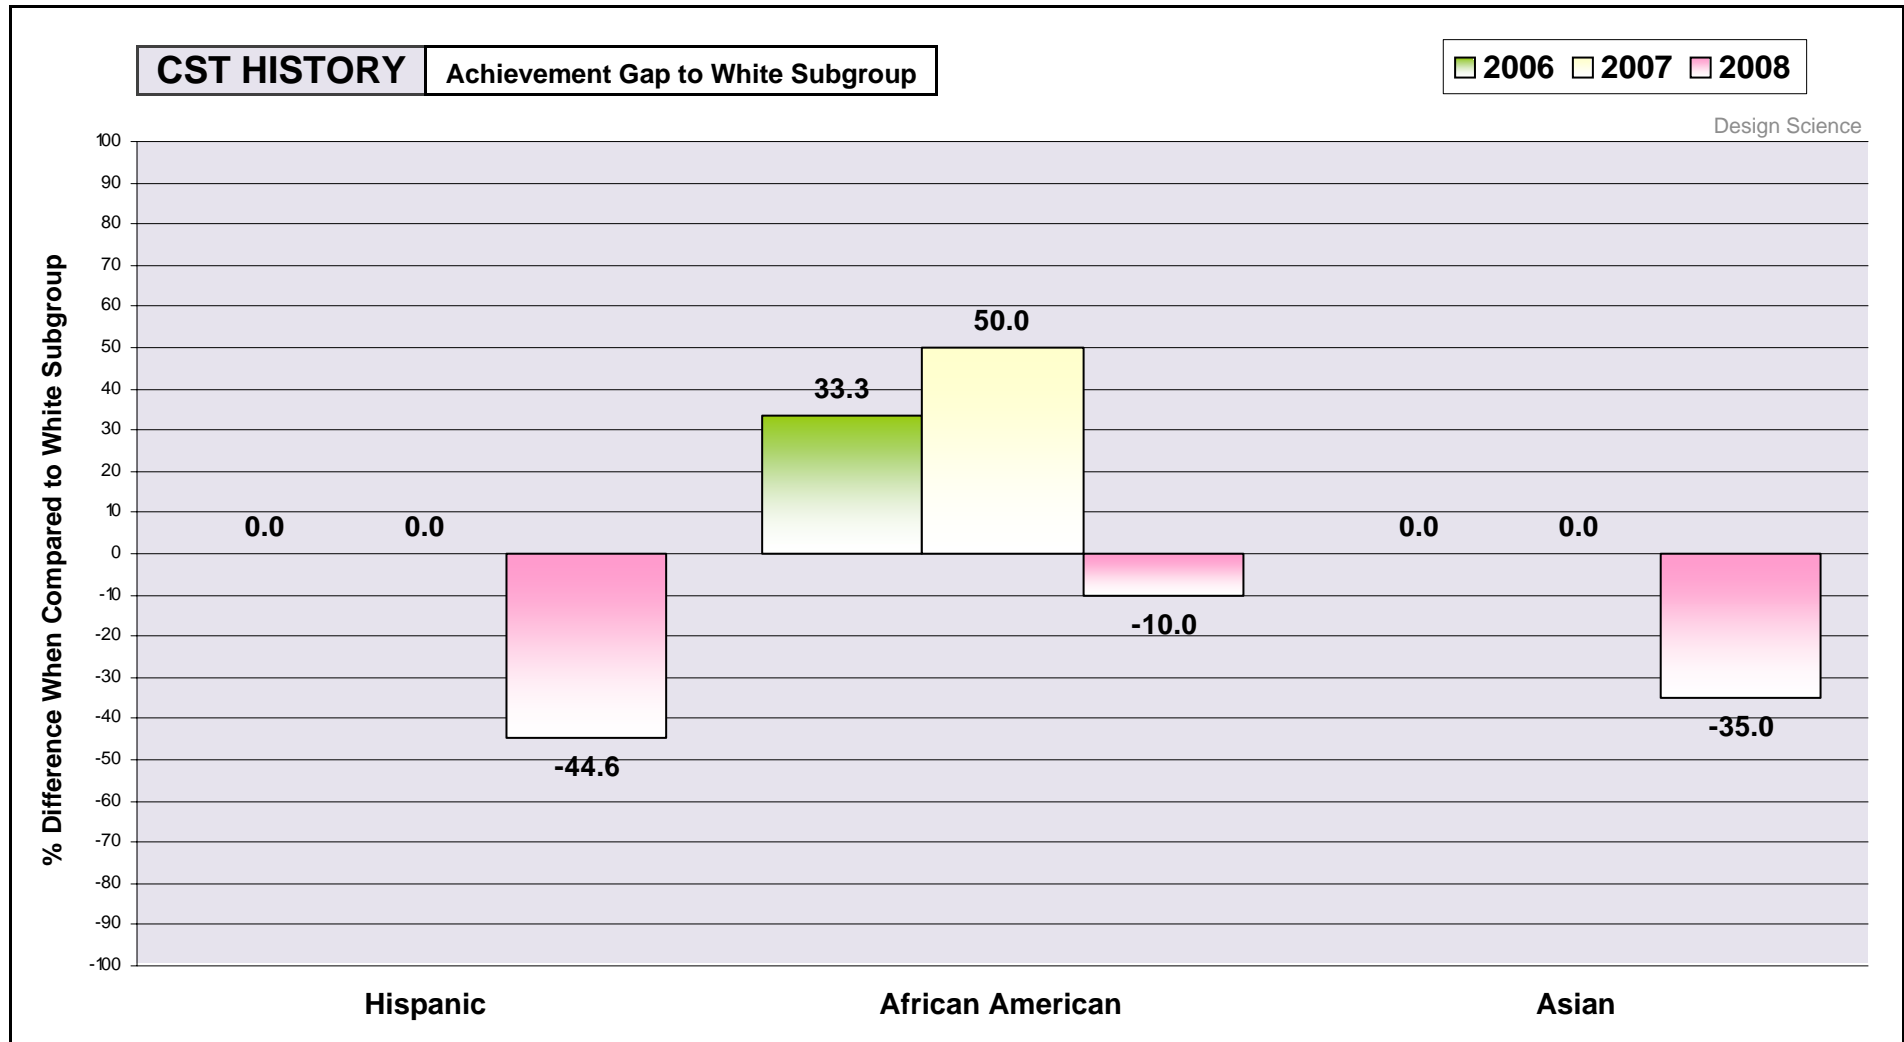

- The purpose for the CST Proficiency Charts is for schools to compare change across years. Therefore, students in grades 3-5 who took the California Modified Assessment (CMA) in 2008 are counted here as scoring not proficient. The California Department of Education (CDE) will not assign proficiency levels for this CMA in 2008.
- The chart is based on students continuously enrolled in the school since October until CST testing of the respective school year.
- CAPA & STS are excluded from the chart.

Design Science HS
(CMA Students Counted as Not Proficient)

- The purpose for the CST Proficiency Charts is for schools to compare change across years. Therefore, students in grades 3-5 who took the California Modified Assessment (CMA) in 2008 are counted here as scoring not proficient. The California Department of Education (CDE) will not assign proficiency levels for this CMA in 2008.
- The chart is based on students continuously enrolled in the school since October until CST testing of the respective school year.
- CAPA & STS are excluded from the chart.

Design Science HS
(CMA Students Counted as Not Proficient)

- The purpose for the CST Proficiency Charts is for schools to compare change across years. Therefore, students in grades 3-5 who took the California Modified Assessment (CMA) in 2008 are counted here as scoring not proficient. The California Department of Education (CDE) will not assign proficiency levels for this CMA in 2008.
- The chart is based on students continuously enrolled in the school since October until CST testing of the respective school year.
- CAPA & STS are excluded from the chart.